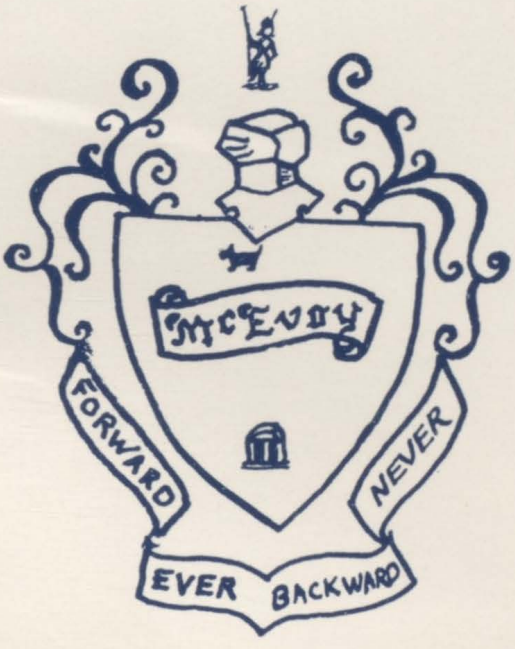
RAMSCOTT '62

RAMSCOTT '62



A. R. Willingham High School for Boys
Margaret McEvoy High School for Girls
Macon, Georgia Volume IV

Foreword

As we glance through the 1962 RamScott, memories of the many valuable experiences we have had during the past school year flash through our minds. With the passing of this year, another milestone in our education is behind us.

We learn every day in all we do; we absorb new ideas from class room activities, organizations, and our relationship with those around us.

We feel it is only just to use as our theme that with which we are concerned, both during the school year and after our association with these institutions has ceased. Fittingly, the 1962 RamScott centers around one of the primary aspects of our existence . . . Education.

Dedication

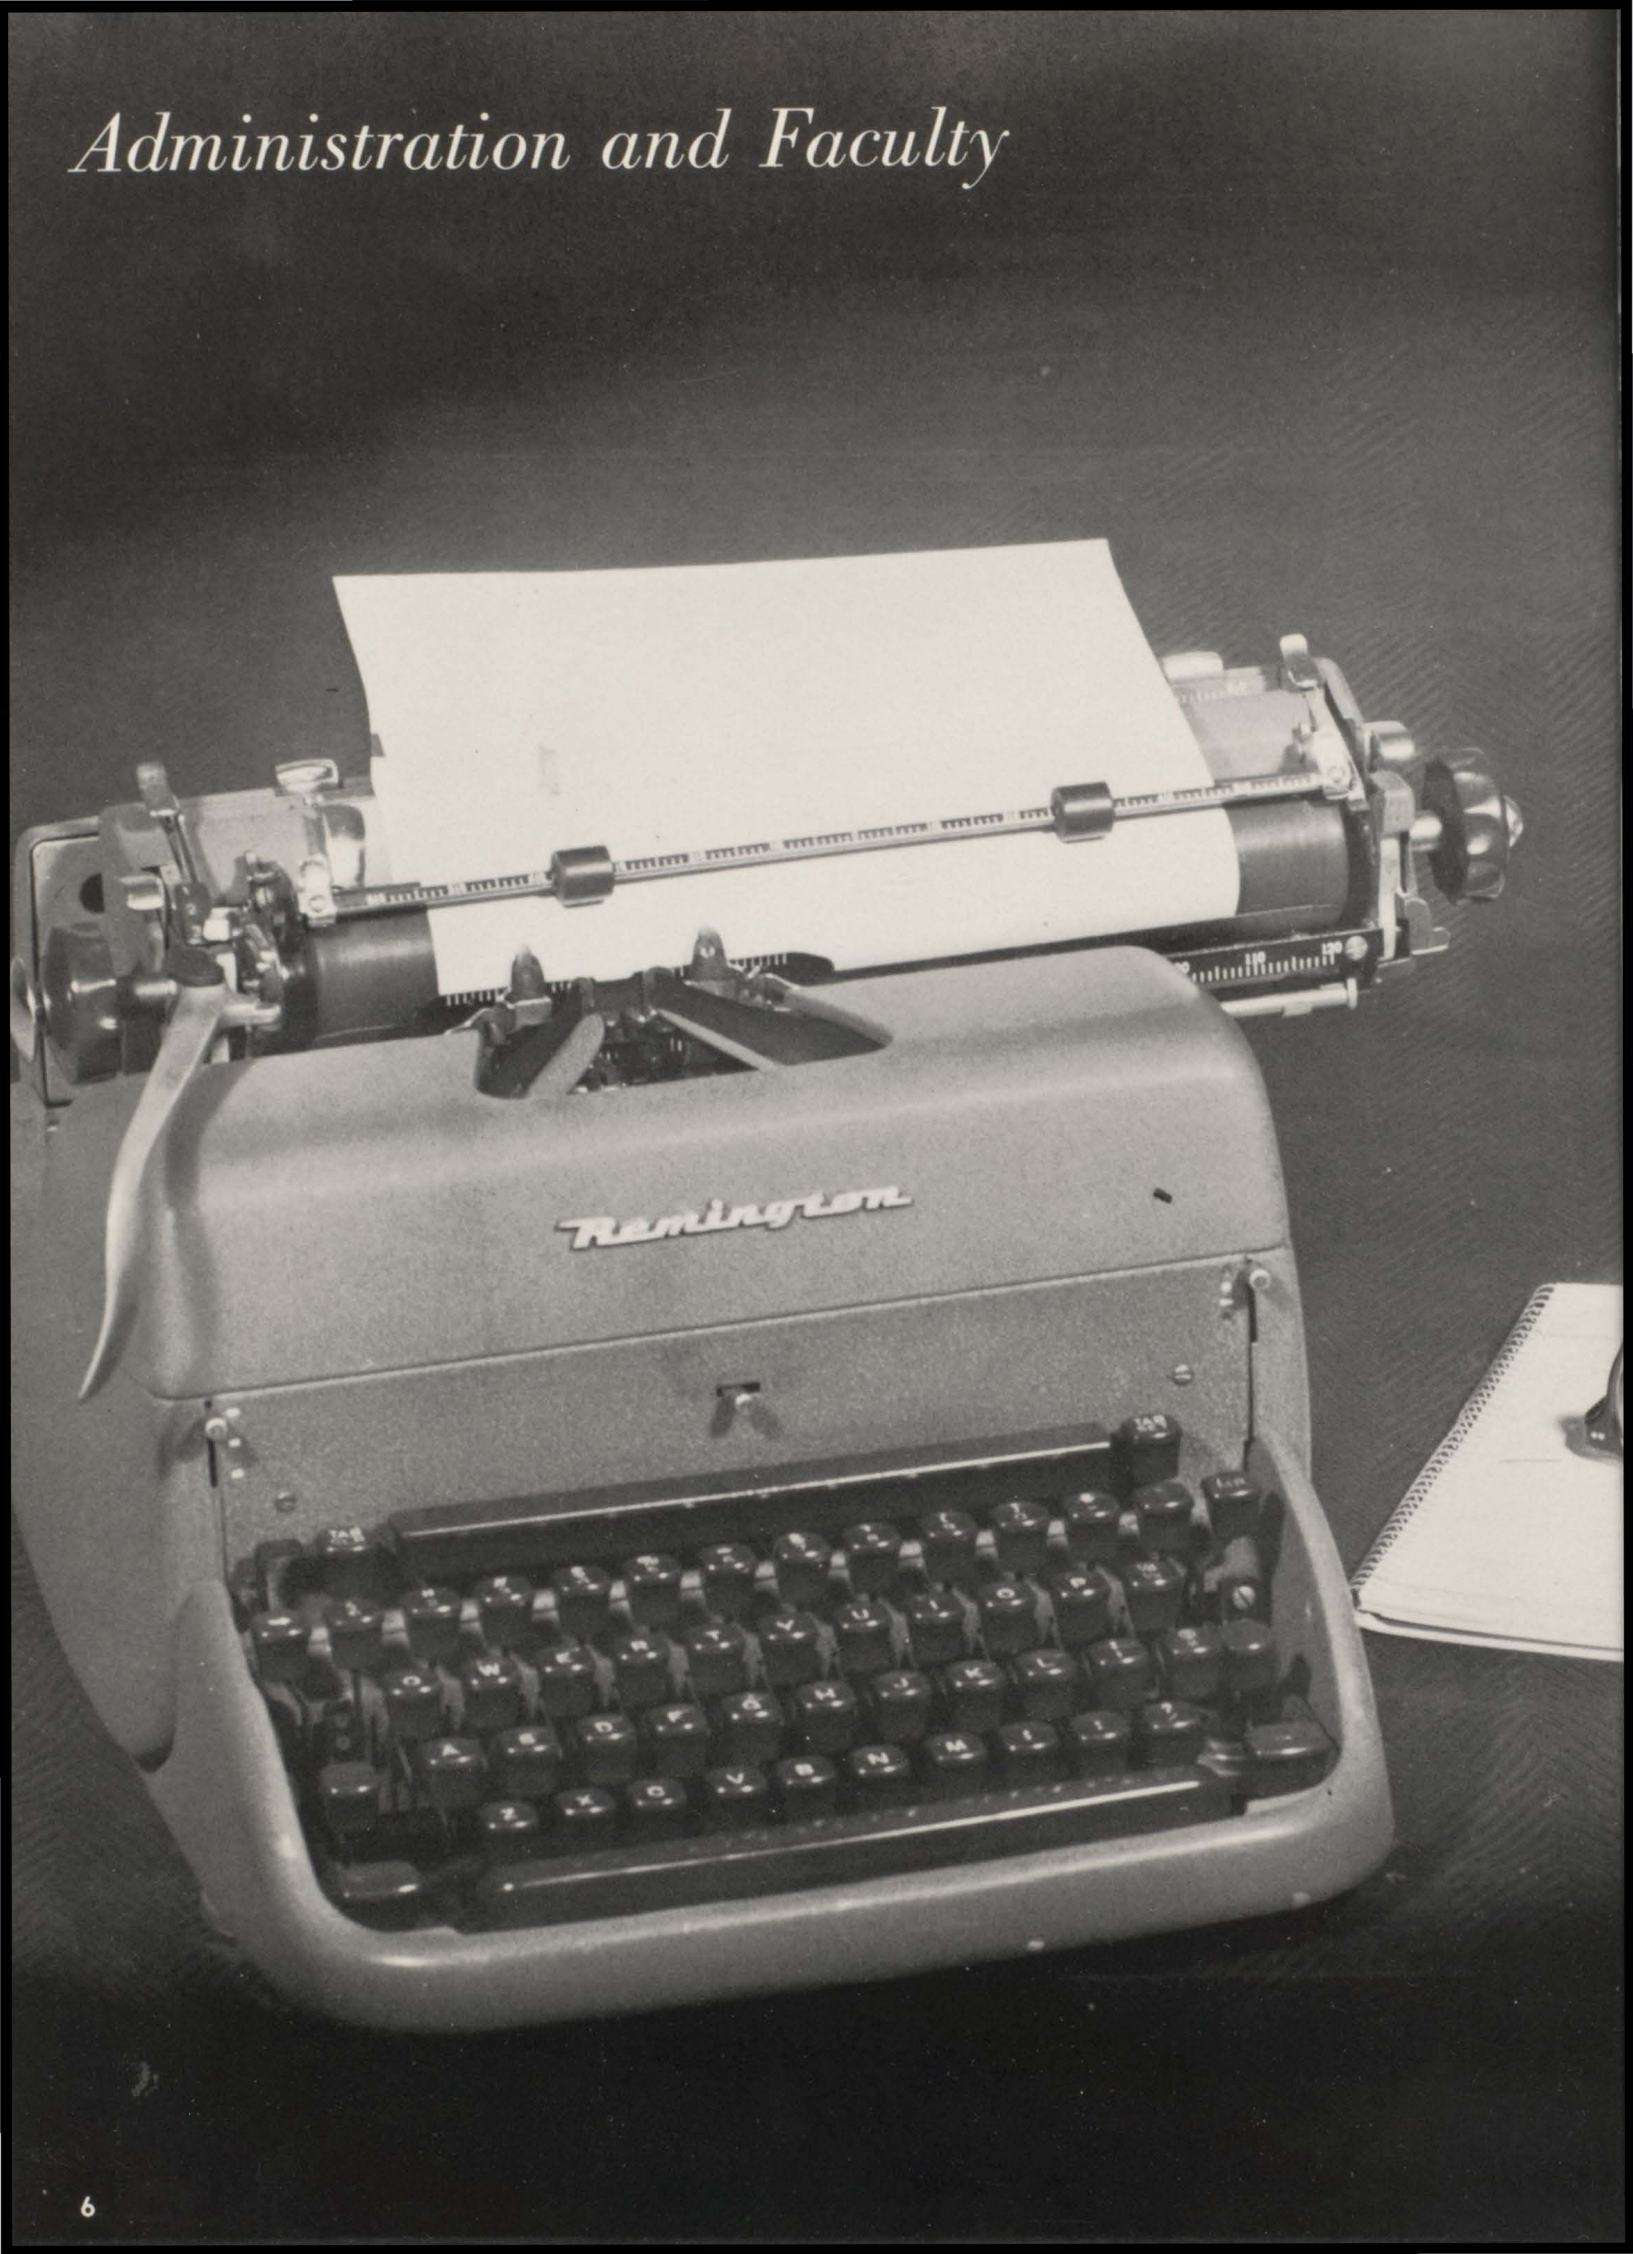
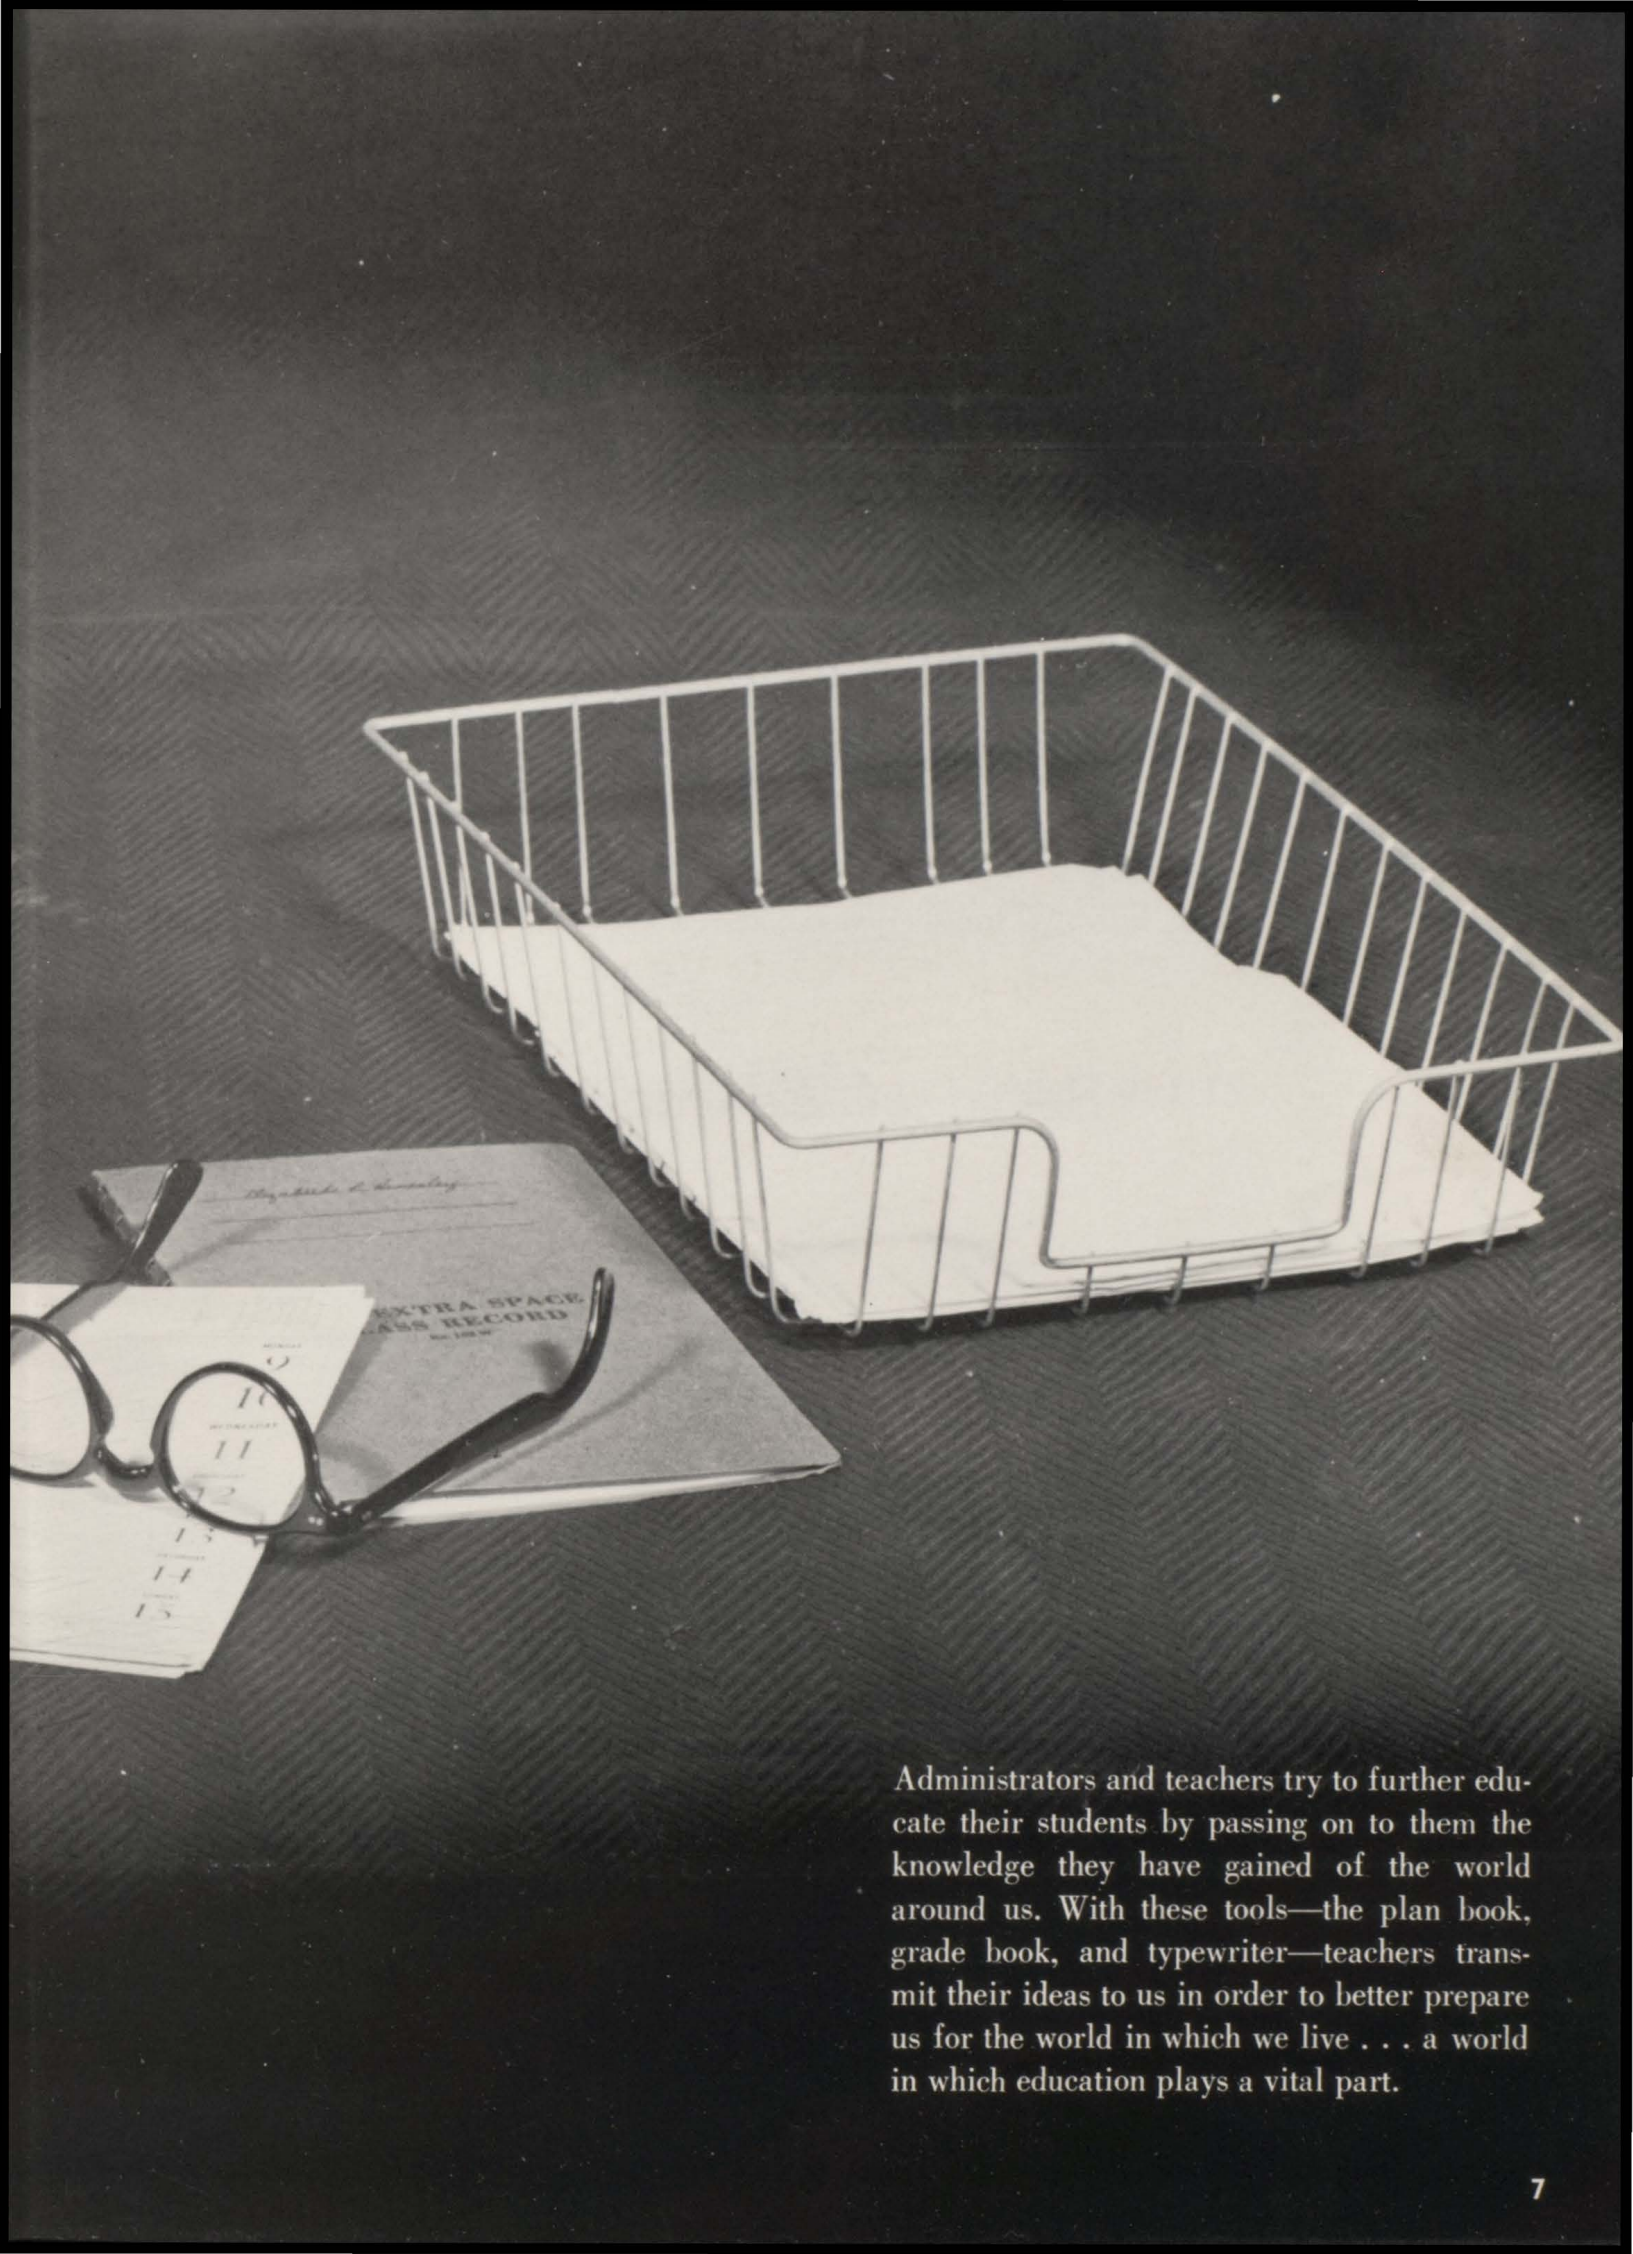
Her great contribution to Willingham is not to be found in organizations, but in persons. She has achieved the perfect balance of serious purpose and sense of humor, keen informed intelligence and warm sympathetic understanding. We of Willingham feel it is only fitting to honor and thank Mrs. Mary Lamback by dedicating our part of the RamScott '62 to her.

Dedication

For her loyal service as the advisor of the McEvoy Student Council, since its establishment; for her warm and friendly smile and greeting; for the patience, understanding, and guidance that she shows to all her students, we of McEvoy dedicate this annual, the 1962 RamScott, to Mrs. Ann B. Hall.

Administration and Faculty





Administrators and teachers try to further educate their students by passing on to them the knowledge they have gained of the world around us. With these tools—the plan book, grade book, and typewriter—teachers transmit their ideas to us in order to better prepare us for the world in which we live . . . a world in which education plays a vital part.

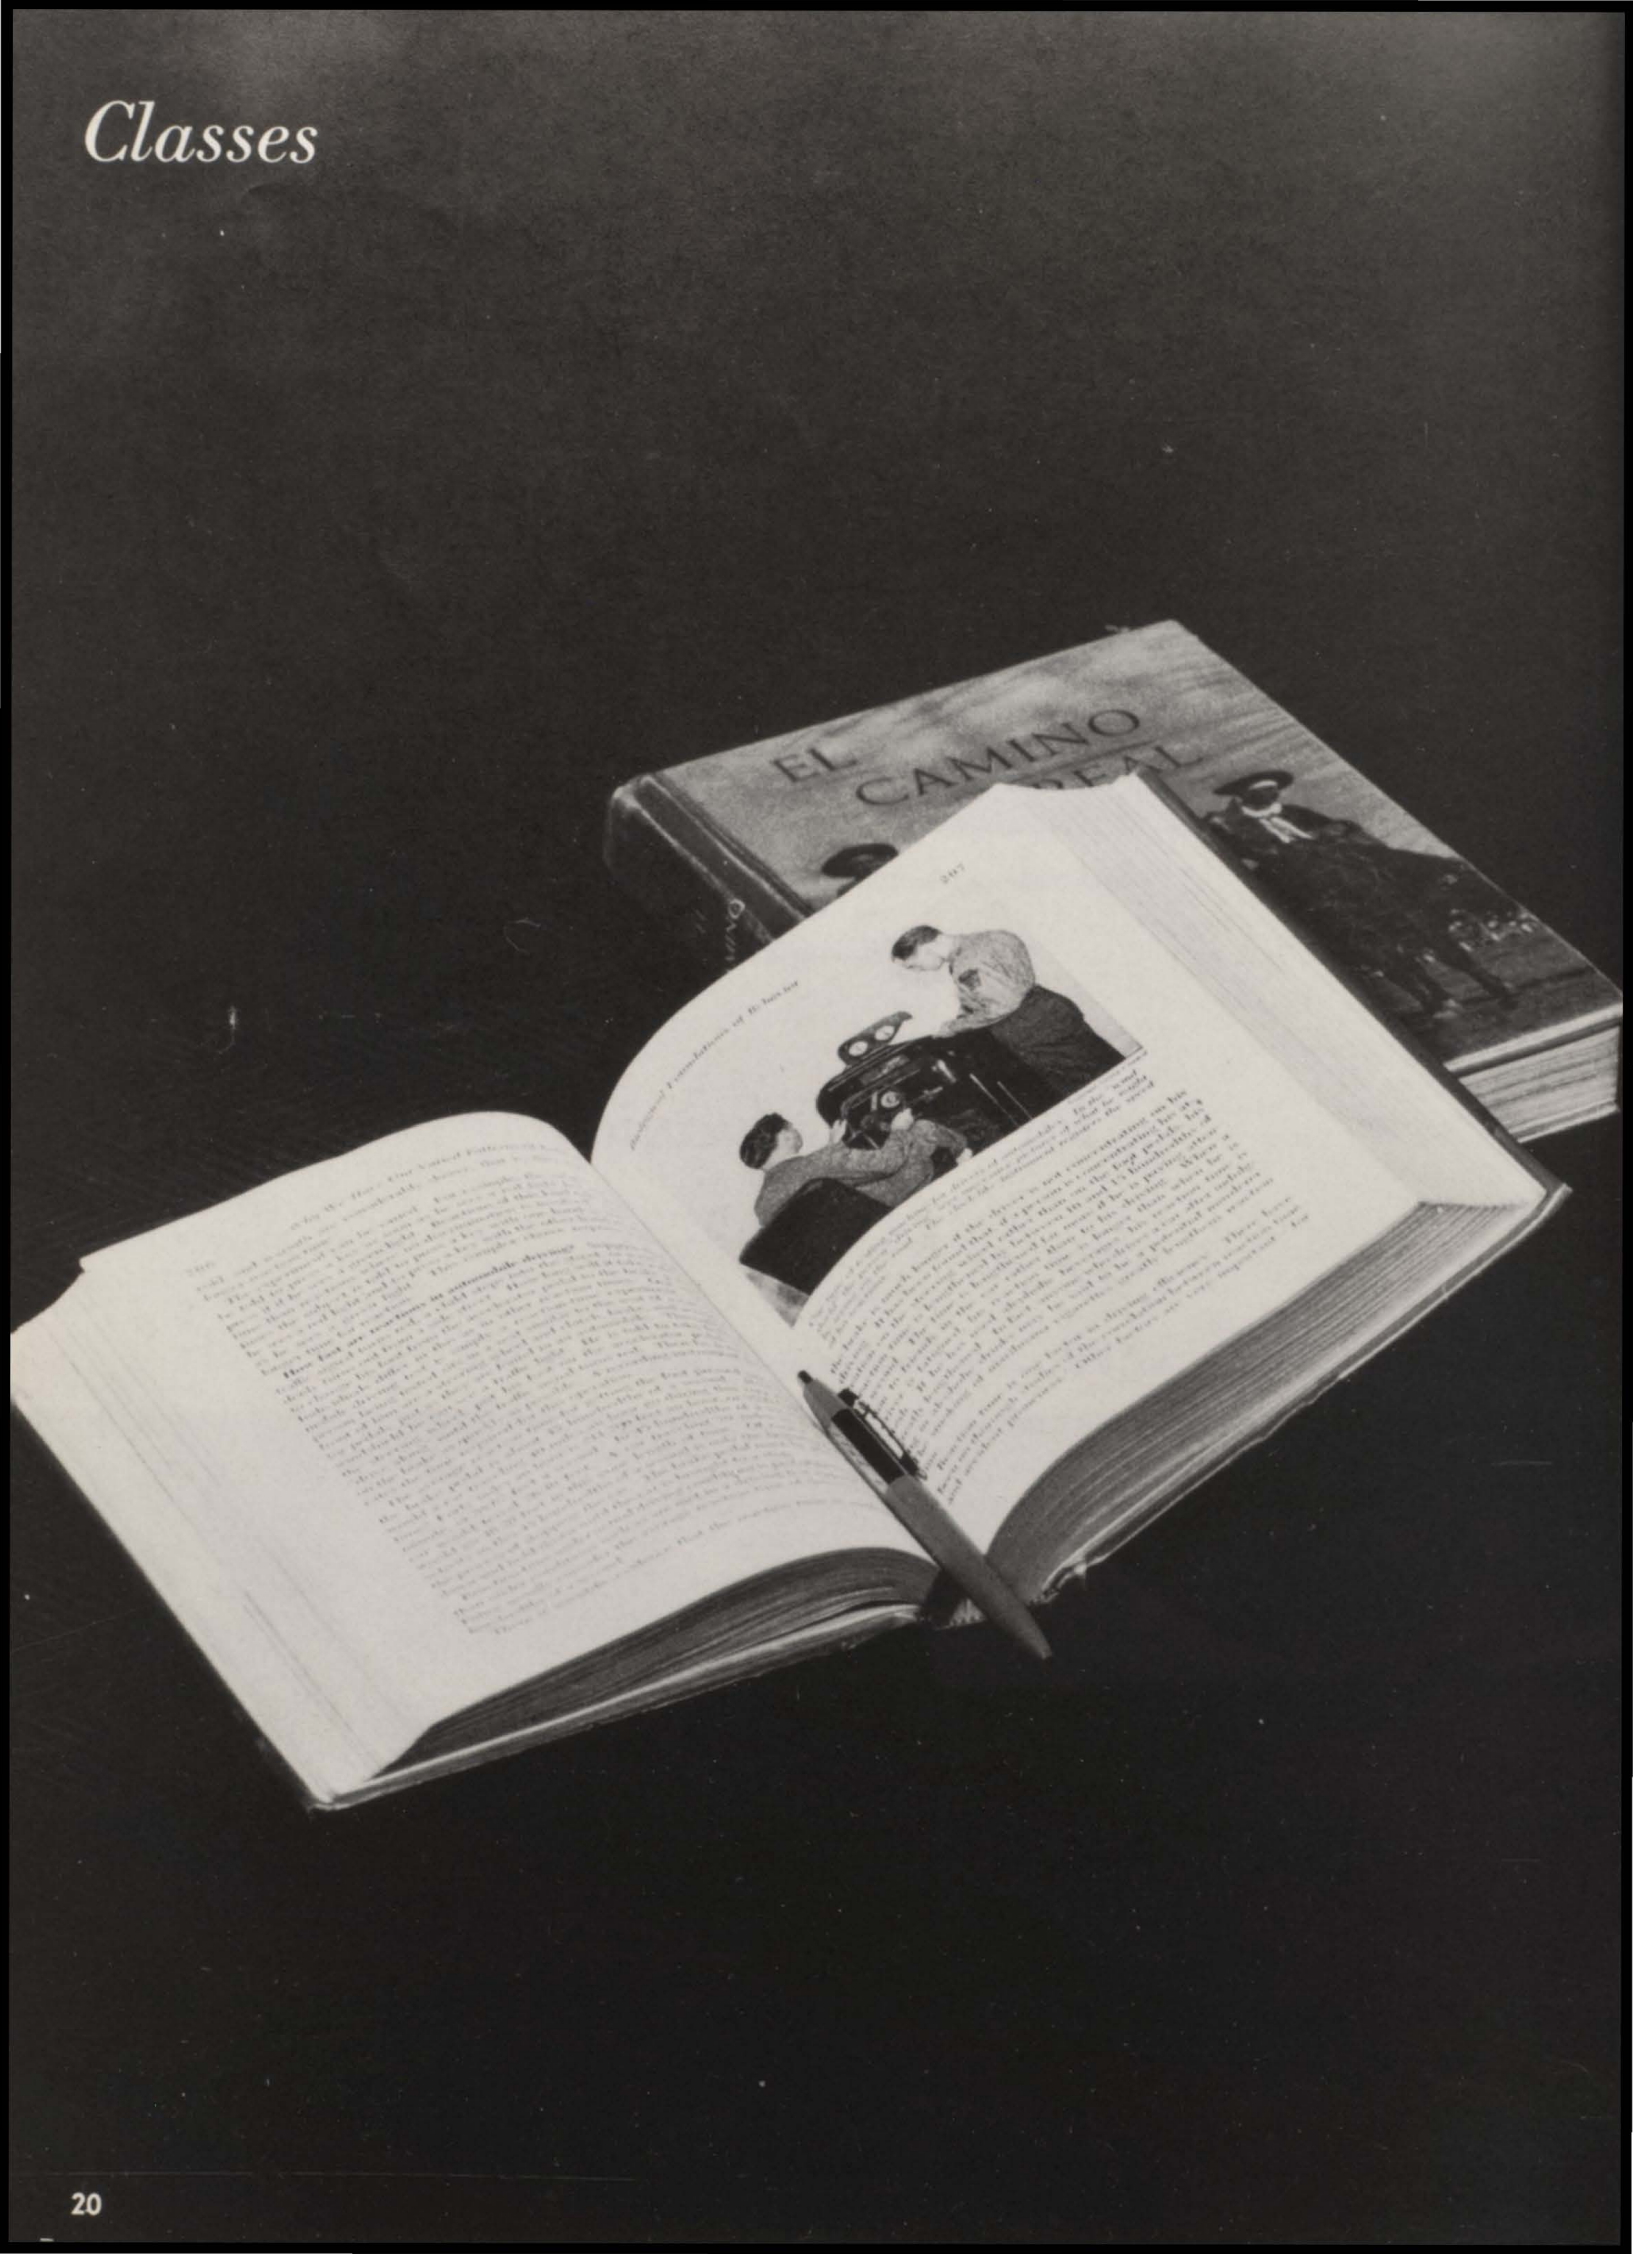
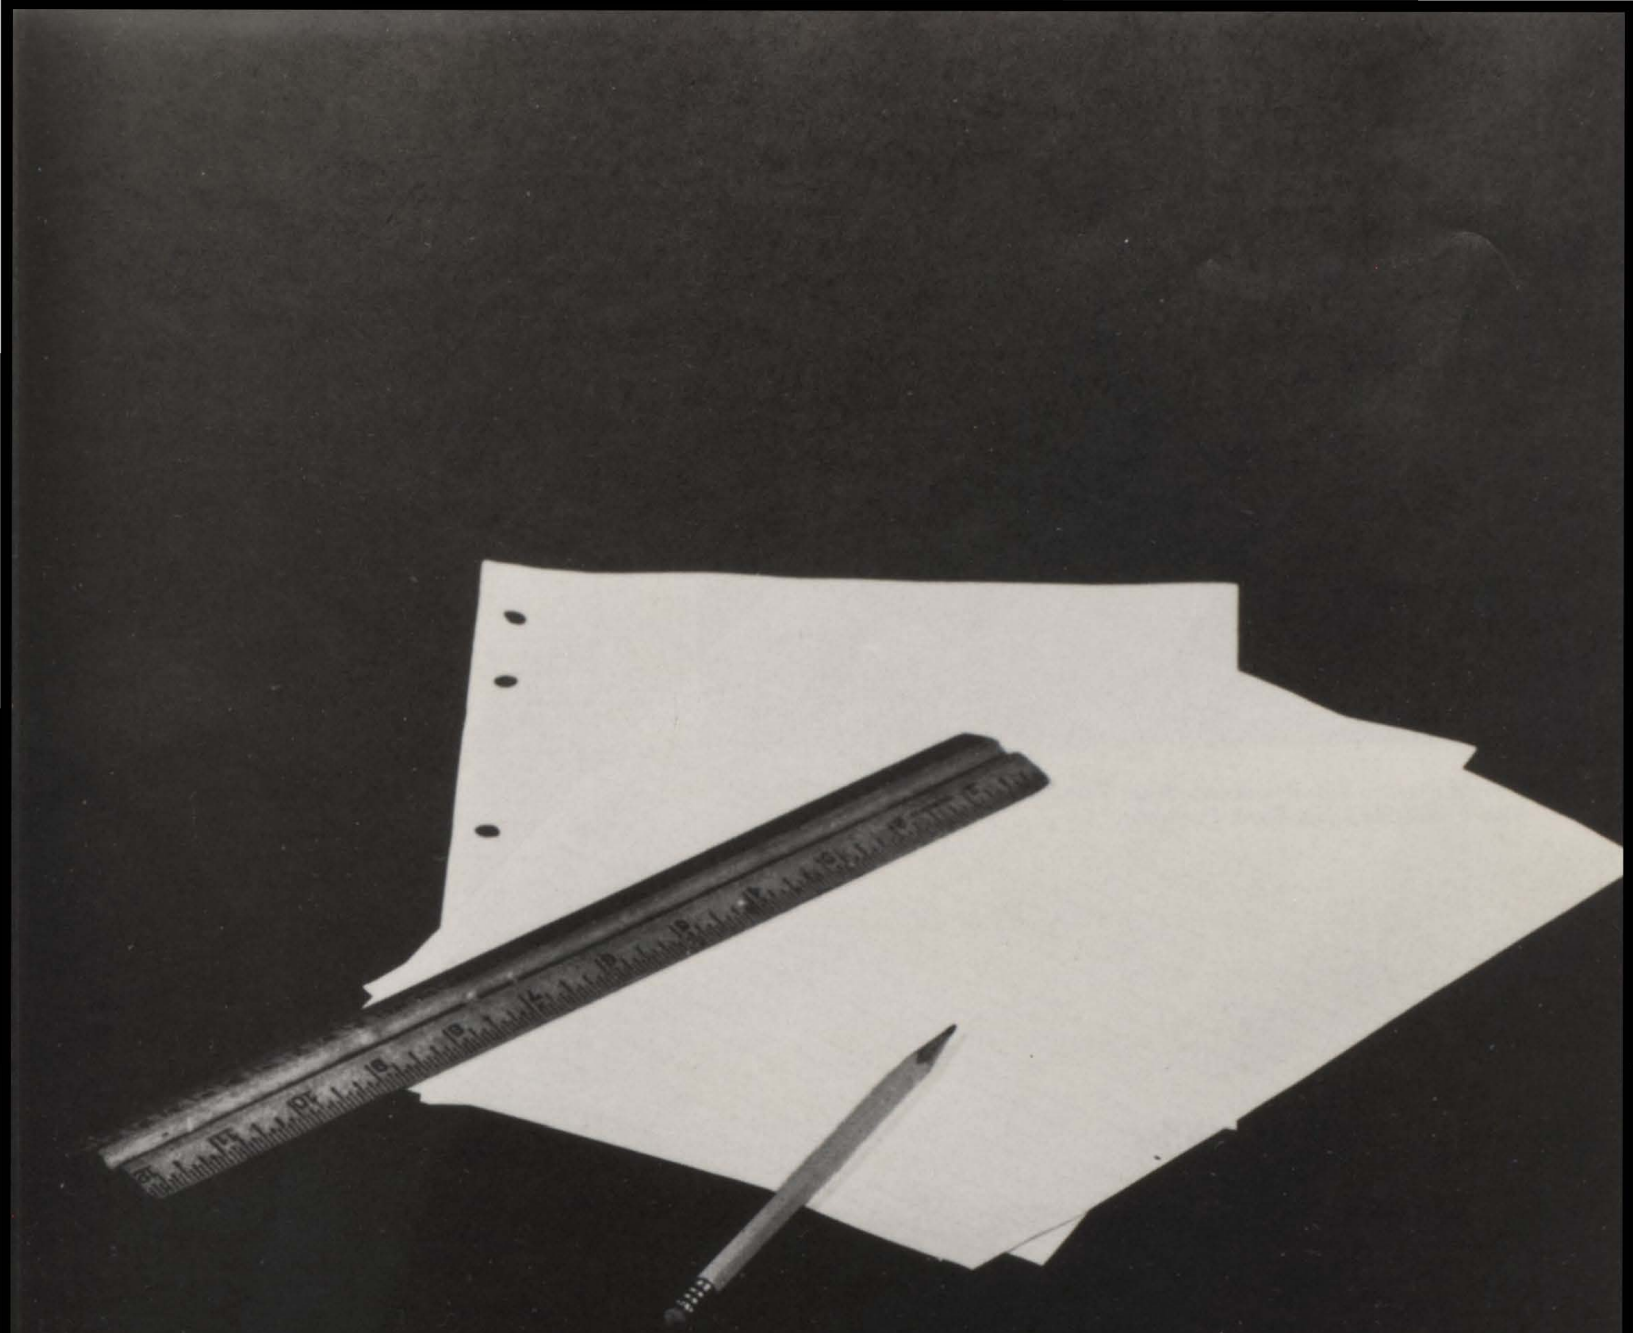
Classes





Our high school years open the doors to our future lives. The keys which open these doors are our implements of learning—books, pens, paper, and rulers. In the future we will look back and remember well our high school years. To strive to make each year the best one of our lives should be the goal of each member of each class.

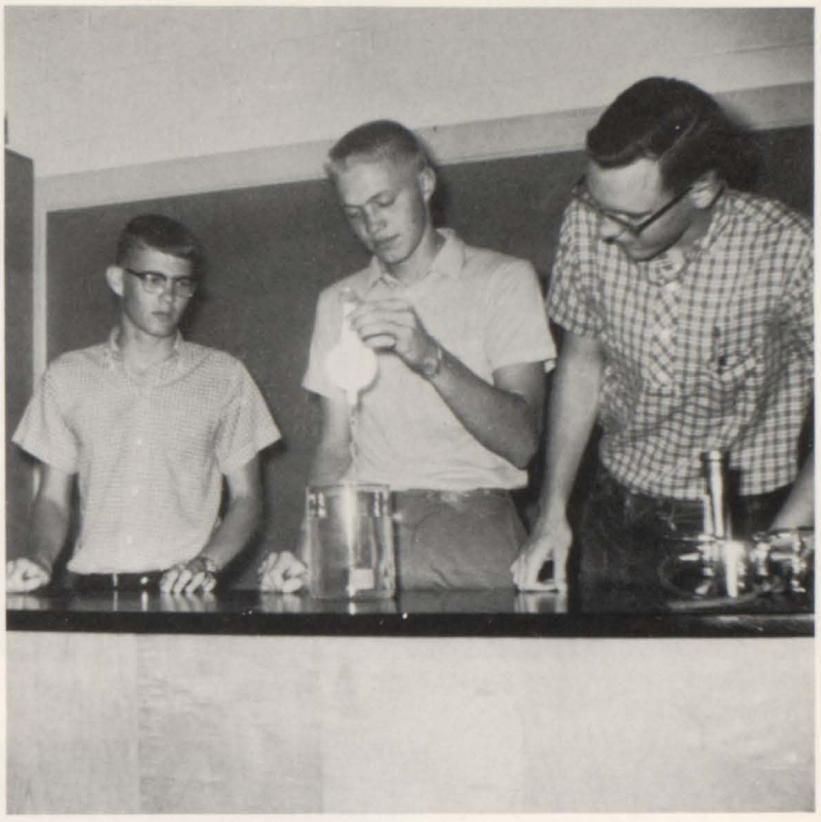
Performing an experiment in Physics class are Wally Baxter, Bobo Olson, and Mike White.



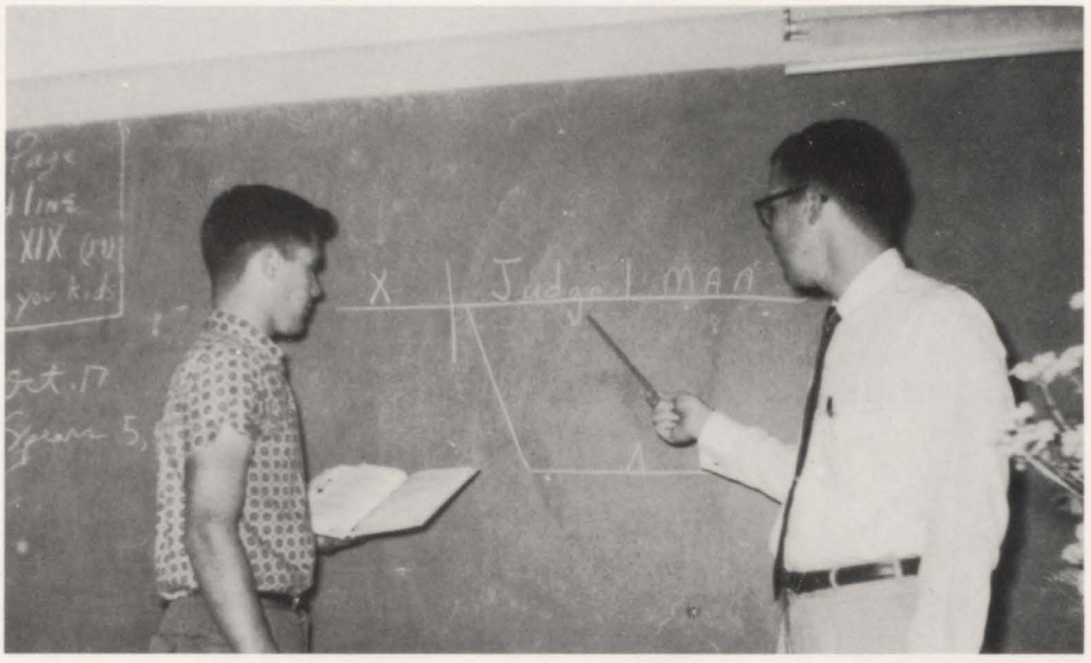
Barbara Gardner, Evelyn Toler, Linda Kelley, Loretta Brown, and Dianne Waters are going from the Journalism class to Vocational School for the printing of the newspaper.

Barbara Jackson, Cherie Carmichael, and Phyllis Lord perform a scene from Macbeth for their College English class.

Classroom Activities

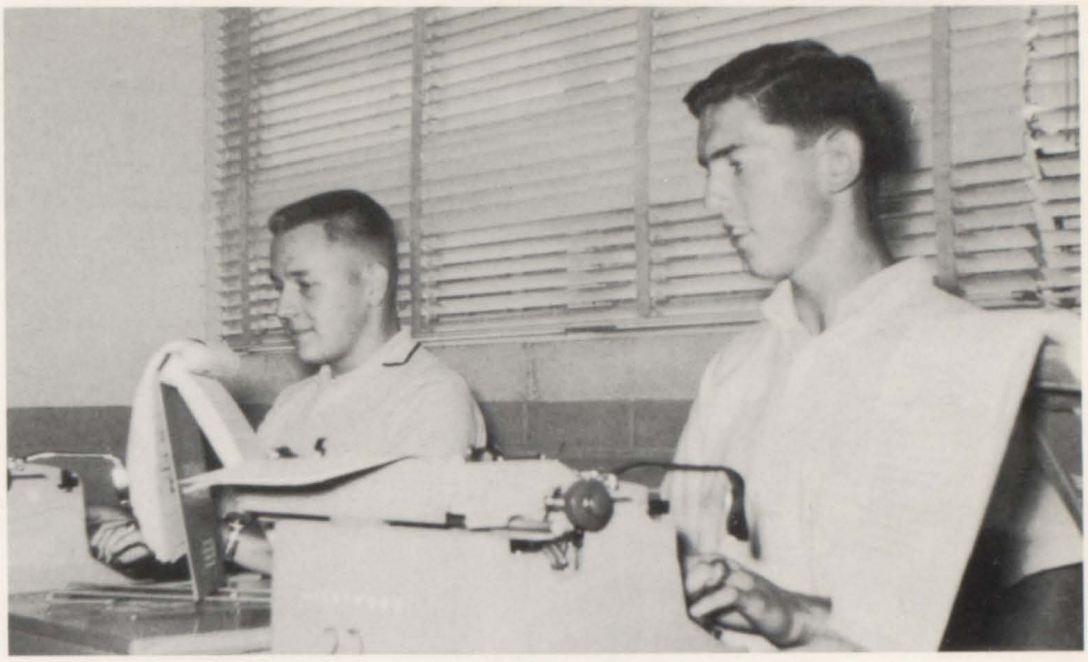
Our activities in the classroom help us in the achievement of our primary objective in school: to prepare ourselves for our future lives by increasing our knowledge. Some of us who are Seniors are at the top of our ladder of ambition; the rest of us are just beginning our climb. Those who are at the top will soon begin our lives in the world; others still have many years of school ahead. Both groups have benefited from hours in the classroom, hours filled with fun and enjoyment as well as with study and work.

Donna Merrill, Linda Proctor, and Jane Brown get practice in transcribing a letter in their senior Shorthand class.



Mr. Byrd explains how to diagram a sentence to Charles Skipper in a senior English class.

Eileen McGahee, Shirley Curtis, Celeste Mackey, and Sandra Capshaw demonstrate to their Physics class a successful experiment.



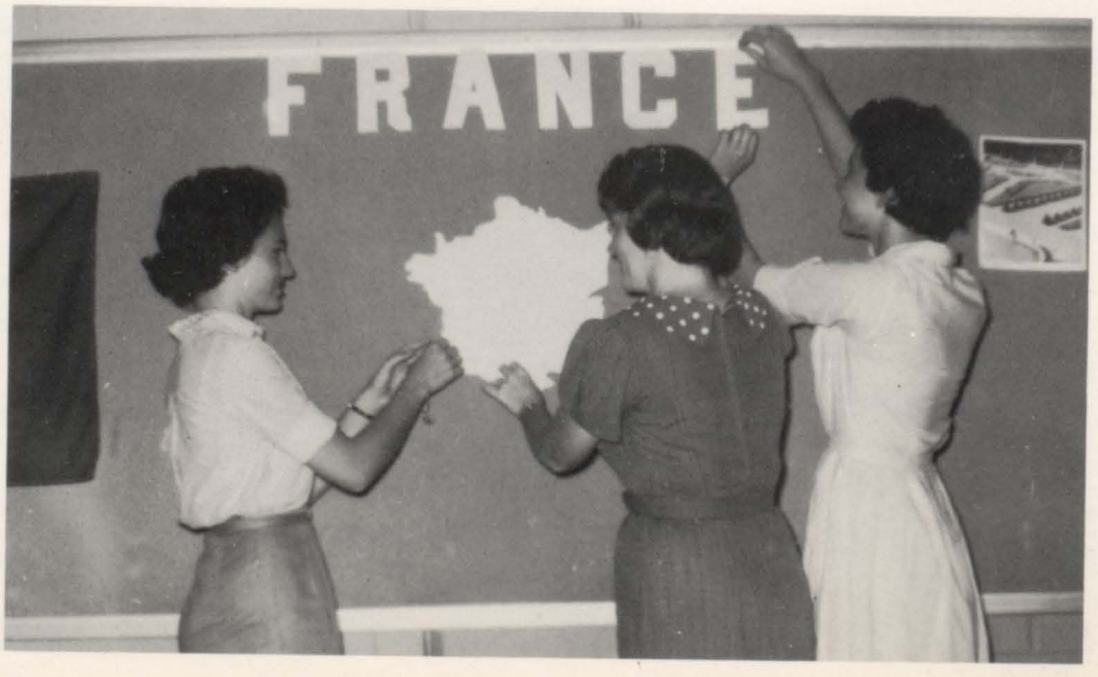
Ronnie Ellington and Johnny Higgison practice in their Typing class.

Indulging in the senior privilege of eating in their cars on the campus are Barbara Gardner, Linda Kelley, and Beverly Miller.

Tony Wilkes explains a confusing problem to Wally Baxter.

Sandra Whitfield, Nita Brown, Sue Jones, and Elizabeth Johnson measure the ingredients for an experiment in Chemistry.

Looking over a book in the Willingham Library is Jimmy Pritchett.



To add interest to the class, Beth Lambert, Shirley Watkins, and Linda Witt prepare a bulletin board for their French class.

Gary Digby and Jimmy Marden are discussing a problem in the diagramming of one of the sentences in their English class.

Pat Sanderson and Jewel Copeland work on the subscription drive for the Bonnie Blue Print, the McEvoy paper.

Robert Horton, Pete Harris, Jerry Morris, Dennis Freeman, and Albert Slocum are hard at work translating from English to Spanish in their Spanish class.

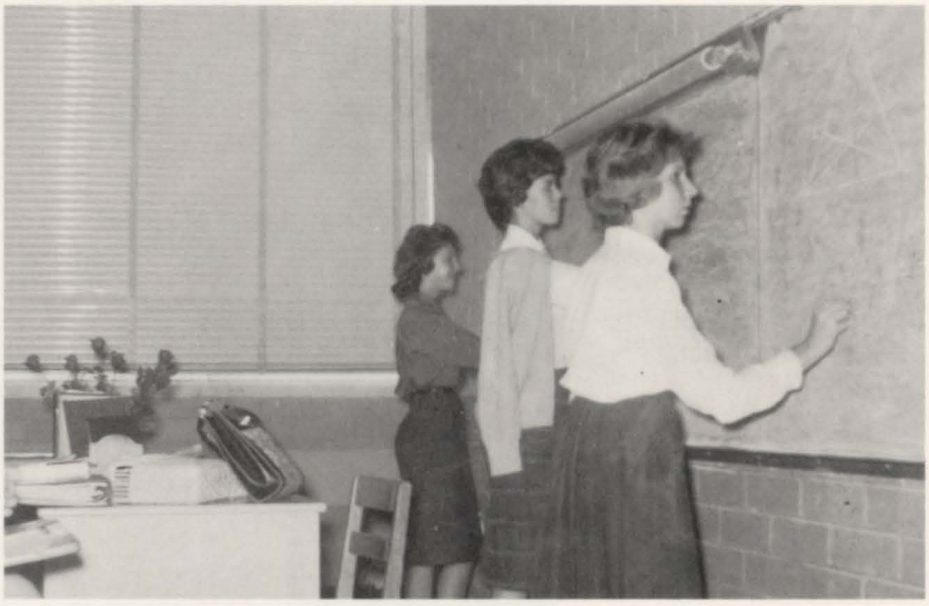
Girls in an American History class take notes on what they read.

Classroom Activities

The members of the junior class have progressed up the ladder of education and are now next to the top. This is your last year to prepare for the great challenge, your senior year. Through work on the Junior-Senior, you are helped to mature into young adults and undertake large responsibilities. Although this is one of your greatest achievements this year, you also have prepared yourselves through studying and learning for your future career. You, the juniors, have developed your personalities through class activities, and have expanded your education through extensive study.



In Geometry, Gloria Stehle, Mirium Odum, and Paula Fields work to prove their theorums.

Johnny Neeves stops between classes to store some books in his locker.

To raise money for the Junior-Senior, Bernice Allen sells Sara Ann Ethridge a pennant while a pleased Jane Farr looks on.

Mark Bowen, Tony Barnes and Jeff Wagner are in an English class.

Sharon Hart, Chris Davis, and Pat Dugger study in General Business.

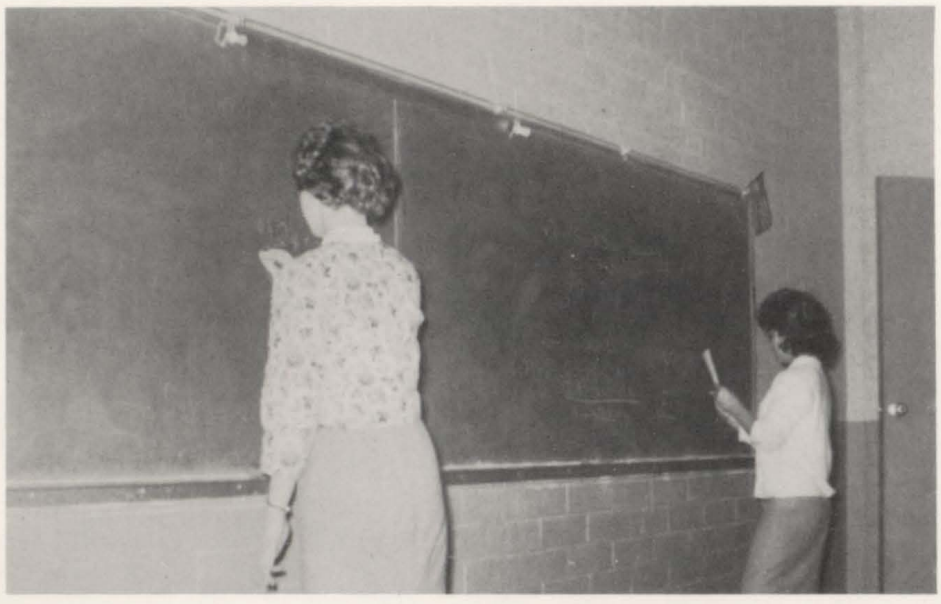
Classroom Activities

The mid-point of our high school education is filled with the many activities of each class. This mid-point is important to the Sophomore class in that it builds upon the character of the individual. We learn how life functions through our studies in biology; through foreign languages and social studies we gain a knowledge of people of today and yesterday; we prepare for our future occupation through general business; and through physical education and inter-supervision sports we learn the competitive urges of life.



Mary Jane Epps and Barbara Lord use the chalk board in Algebra 10.

Shirley Arrington, Sally Hollomon, Harriet Arrowood Mercedes Neves, Glenda Bryant, and Barbara Goldstein study insects in Biology 10.

Studying is important to these boys taking Drivers' Education.

Joe McDaniel performs in his Physical Education class.

Emily Loden, Runell Short, Mrs. Berlin, and Charlotte Moore discuss a point on the map in a Geography class.

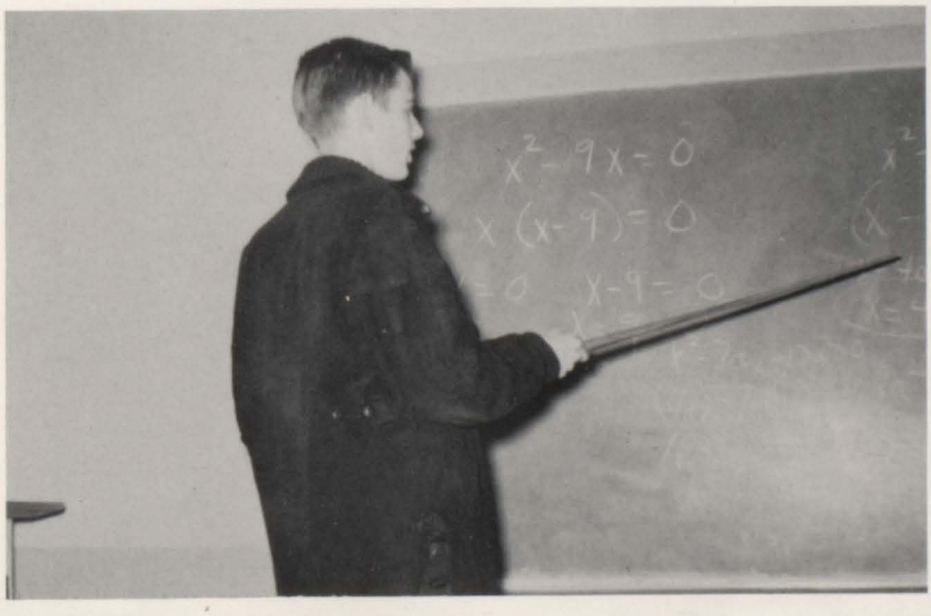
Classroom Activities

This important year of preparation for furthering our education is the freshman year. We have adjusted to high school life and have settled down to the work we must do in order to complete our education. Our choice of subjects has given us a foundation for the life we will lead after graduation. This year will set the pattern for our studies for our remaining high school years.

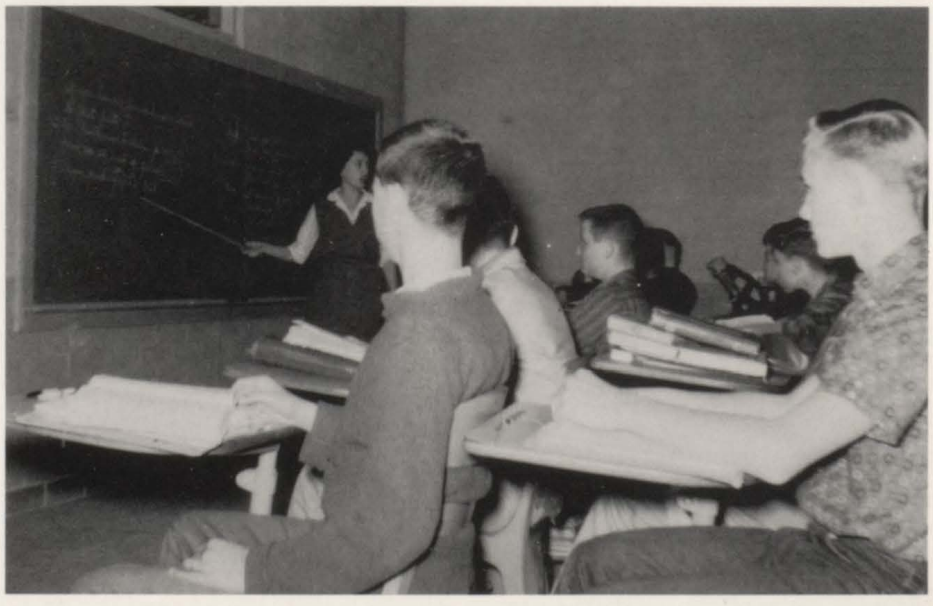
Dorothy Short and Peggy Fuller show their English class posters they have prepared.



Mark Ethier analyzes a problem in Algebra.

Mrs. Taylor lectures to a class in World History.

Sandra Colter, Brenda Hall, and Delinda Tomberlin prepare a bulletin board for their Science classroom.



Boys in a Science class pay close attention as their teacher points out something of interest to them.

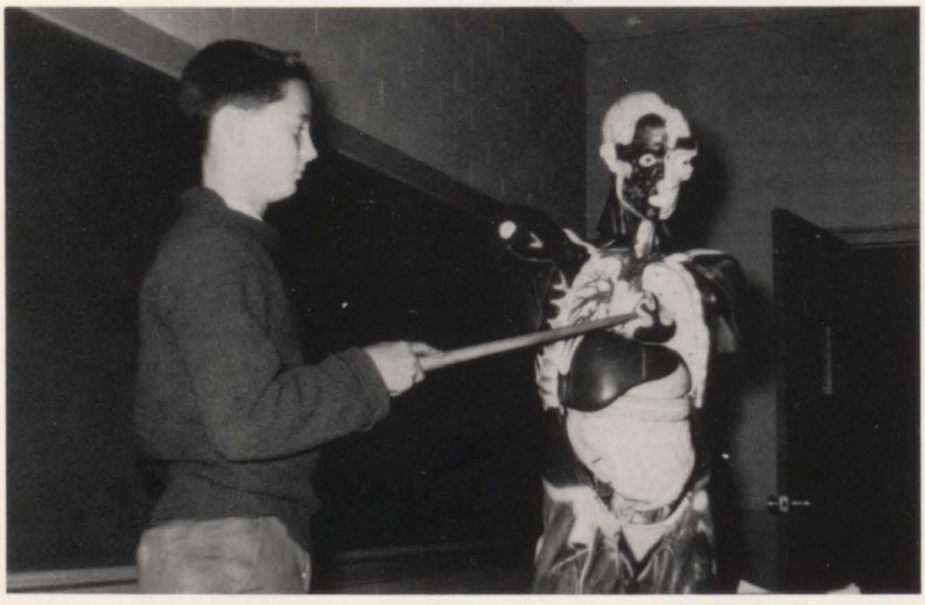
Classroom Activities

From our basic ideas of education our minds have developed to enclose the advanced subjects of our sub-freshman year. We have now become accustomed to the organization of high school and have enlarged our circle of friends through the many activities of the classroom and membership in clubs. We are developing individualism, becoming ourselves instead of merely members of a group. We are now getting ready to enter the world as young adults, living as the right kind of Americans.

Carol Oakley and Sandra Martin discuss the weather in their Science class.



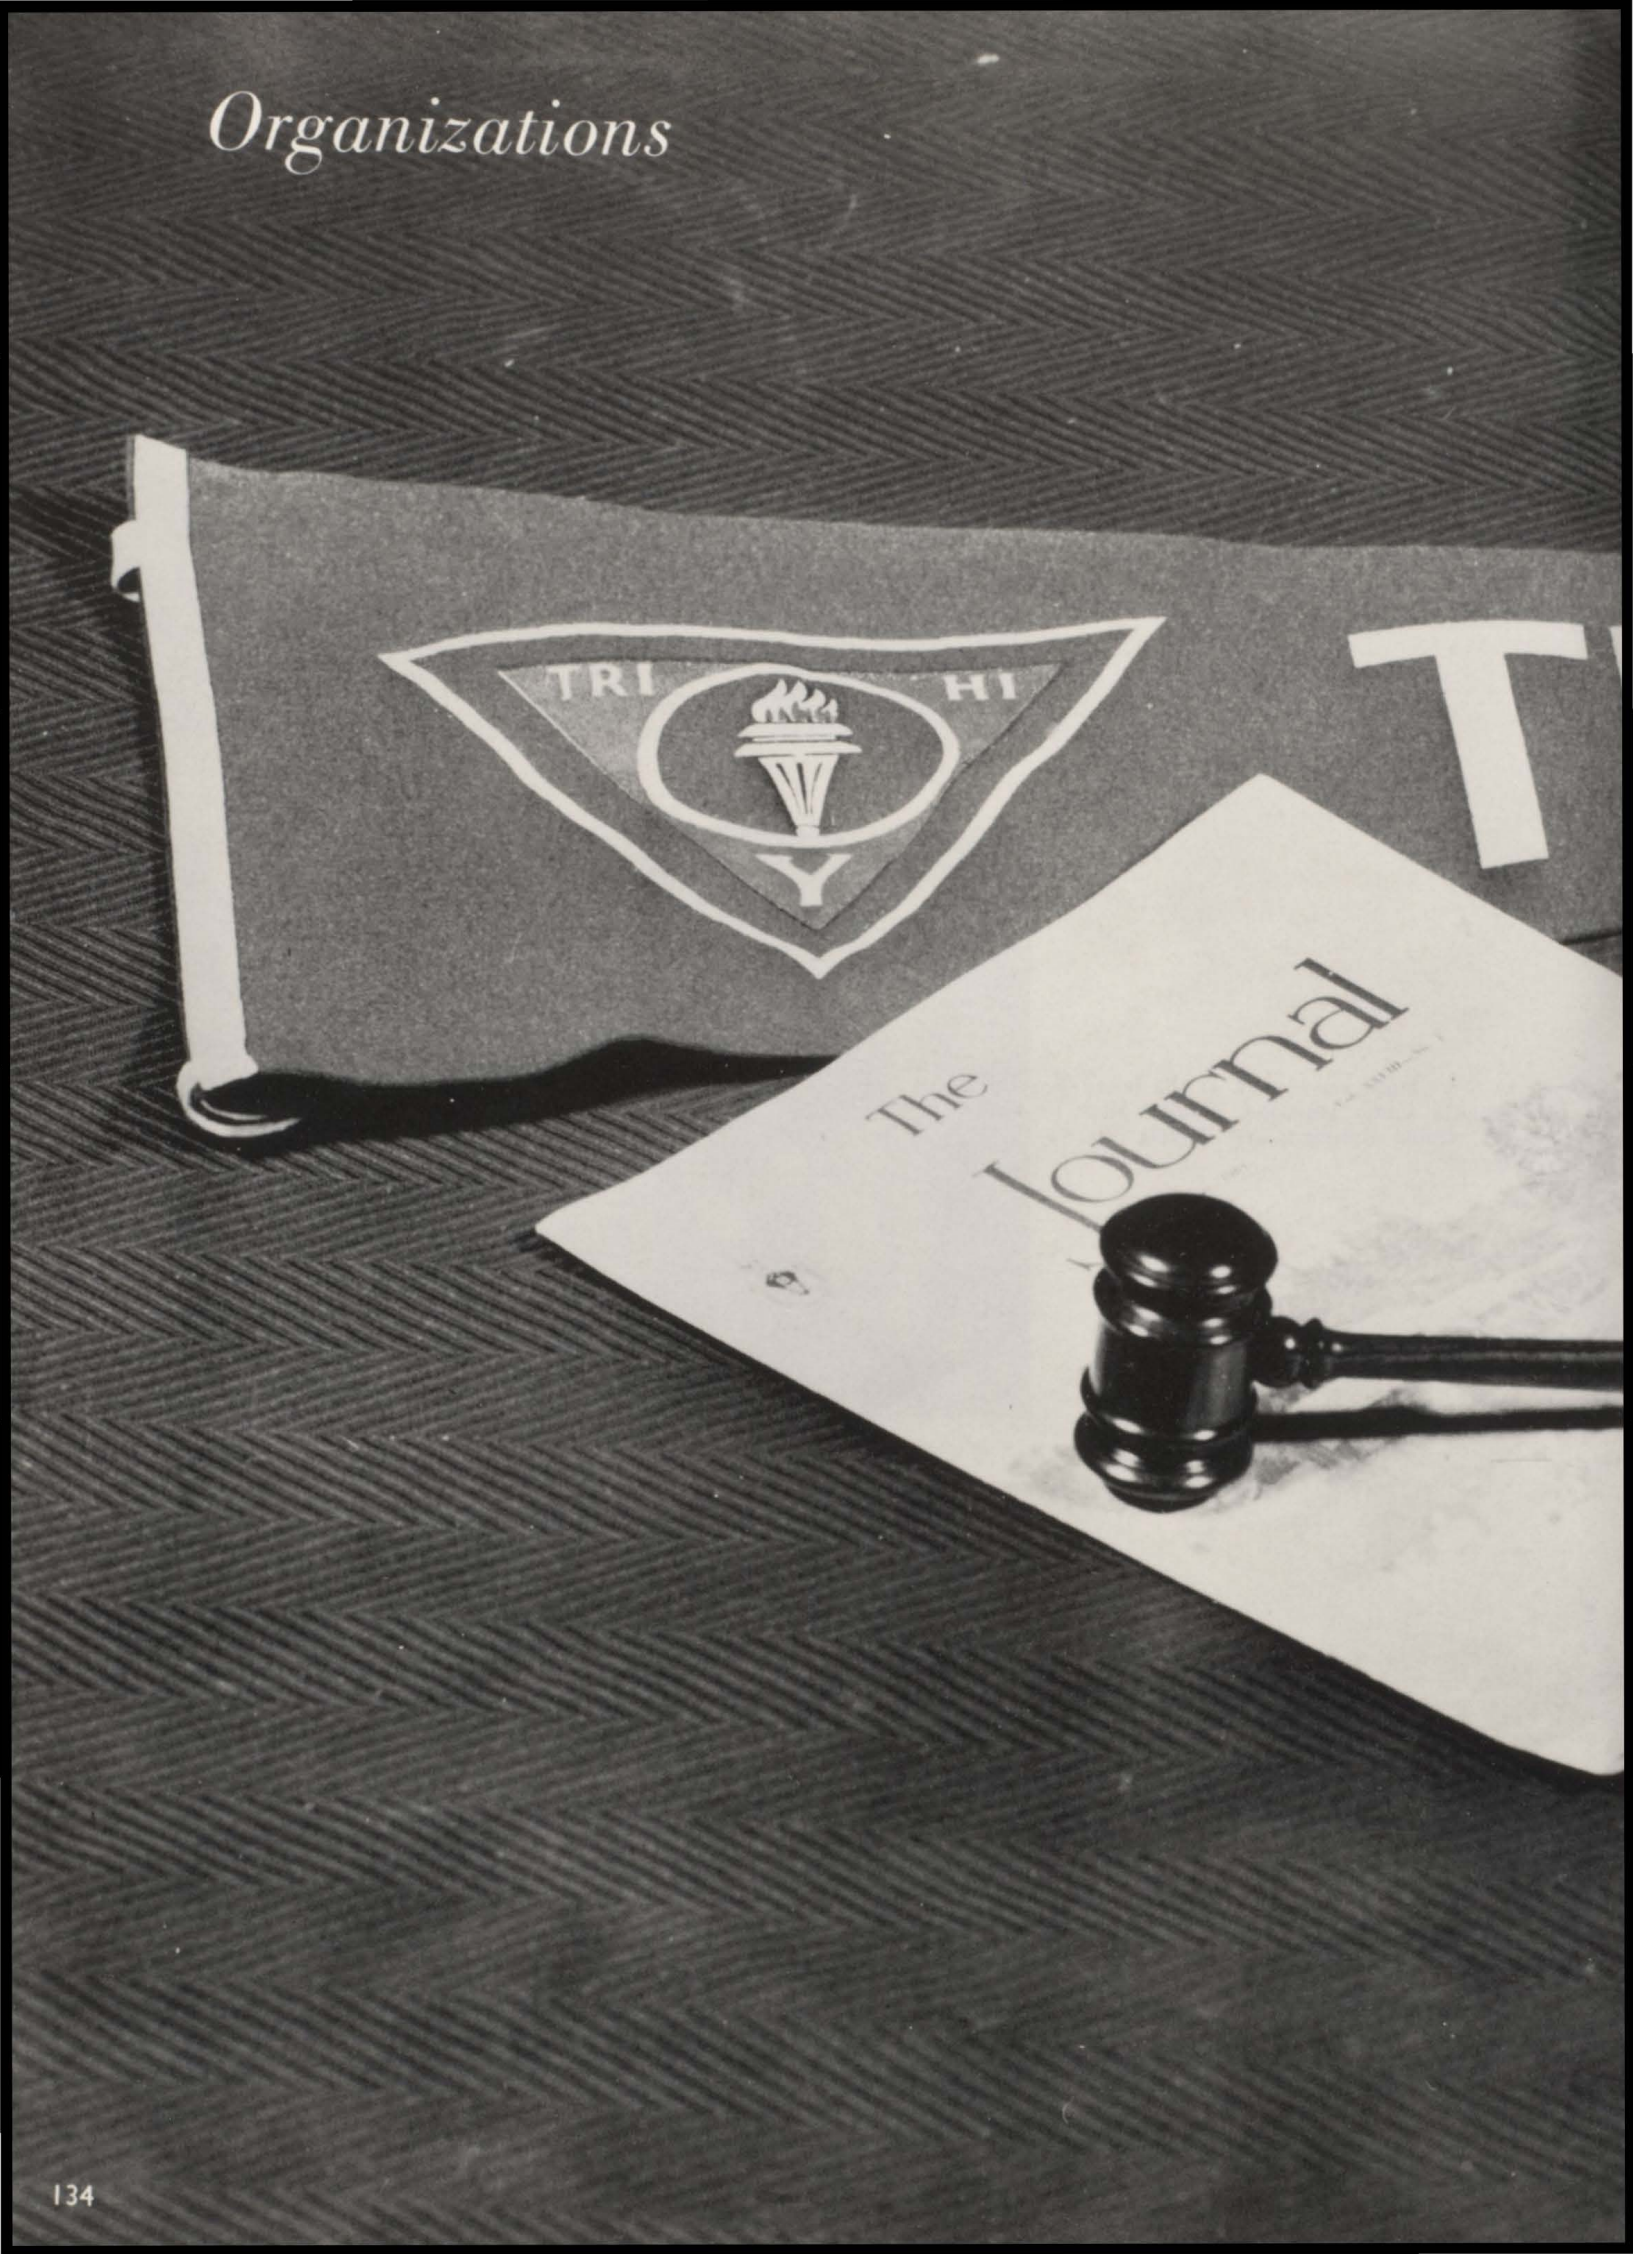
In his Science class, Gary Arnold is learning of the varied systems the body contains.

Ray Hamlin and Darrell Young learn to use a protractor in Math.

In their Math class, work at the board benefits Linda Hawkins, Sandra Morgan, Ouida Brannan, and Angela Visage.

In Mrs. Miller's Homemaking class, Linda Kitchens discusses the Christmas decoration she has made.

Organizations



Through our work and fellowship in school organizations and clubs, we build our personalities, characters, and educations. As members of honor societies, we have our outstanding achievements recognized. Service clubs strive to promote the welfare of our school and community, so that we might better our relations with the people around us. Through membership in sports clubs, we learn to better ourselves in physical education. Musical ability is brought forth in the musical organizations. One of the most important organizations is the student government body, teaching us the democratic principles and way of life. As our active participation in the classroom aids us to grow in scholarship, so our active participation in organizations aids us to grow in the ability to work and to get along with people.

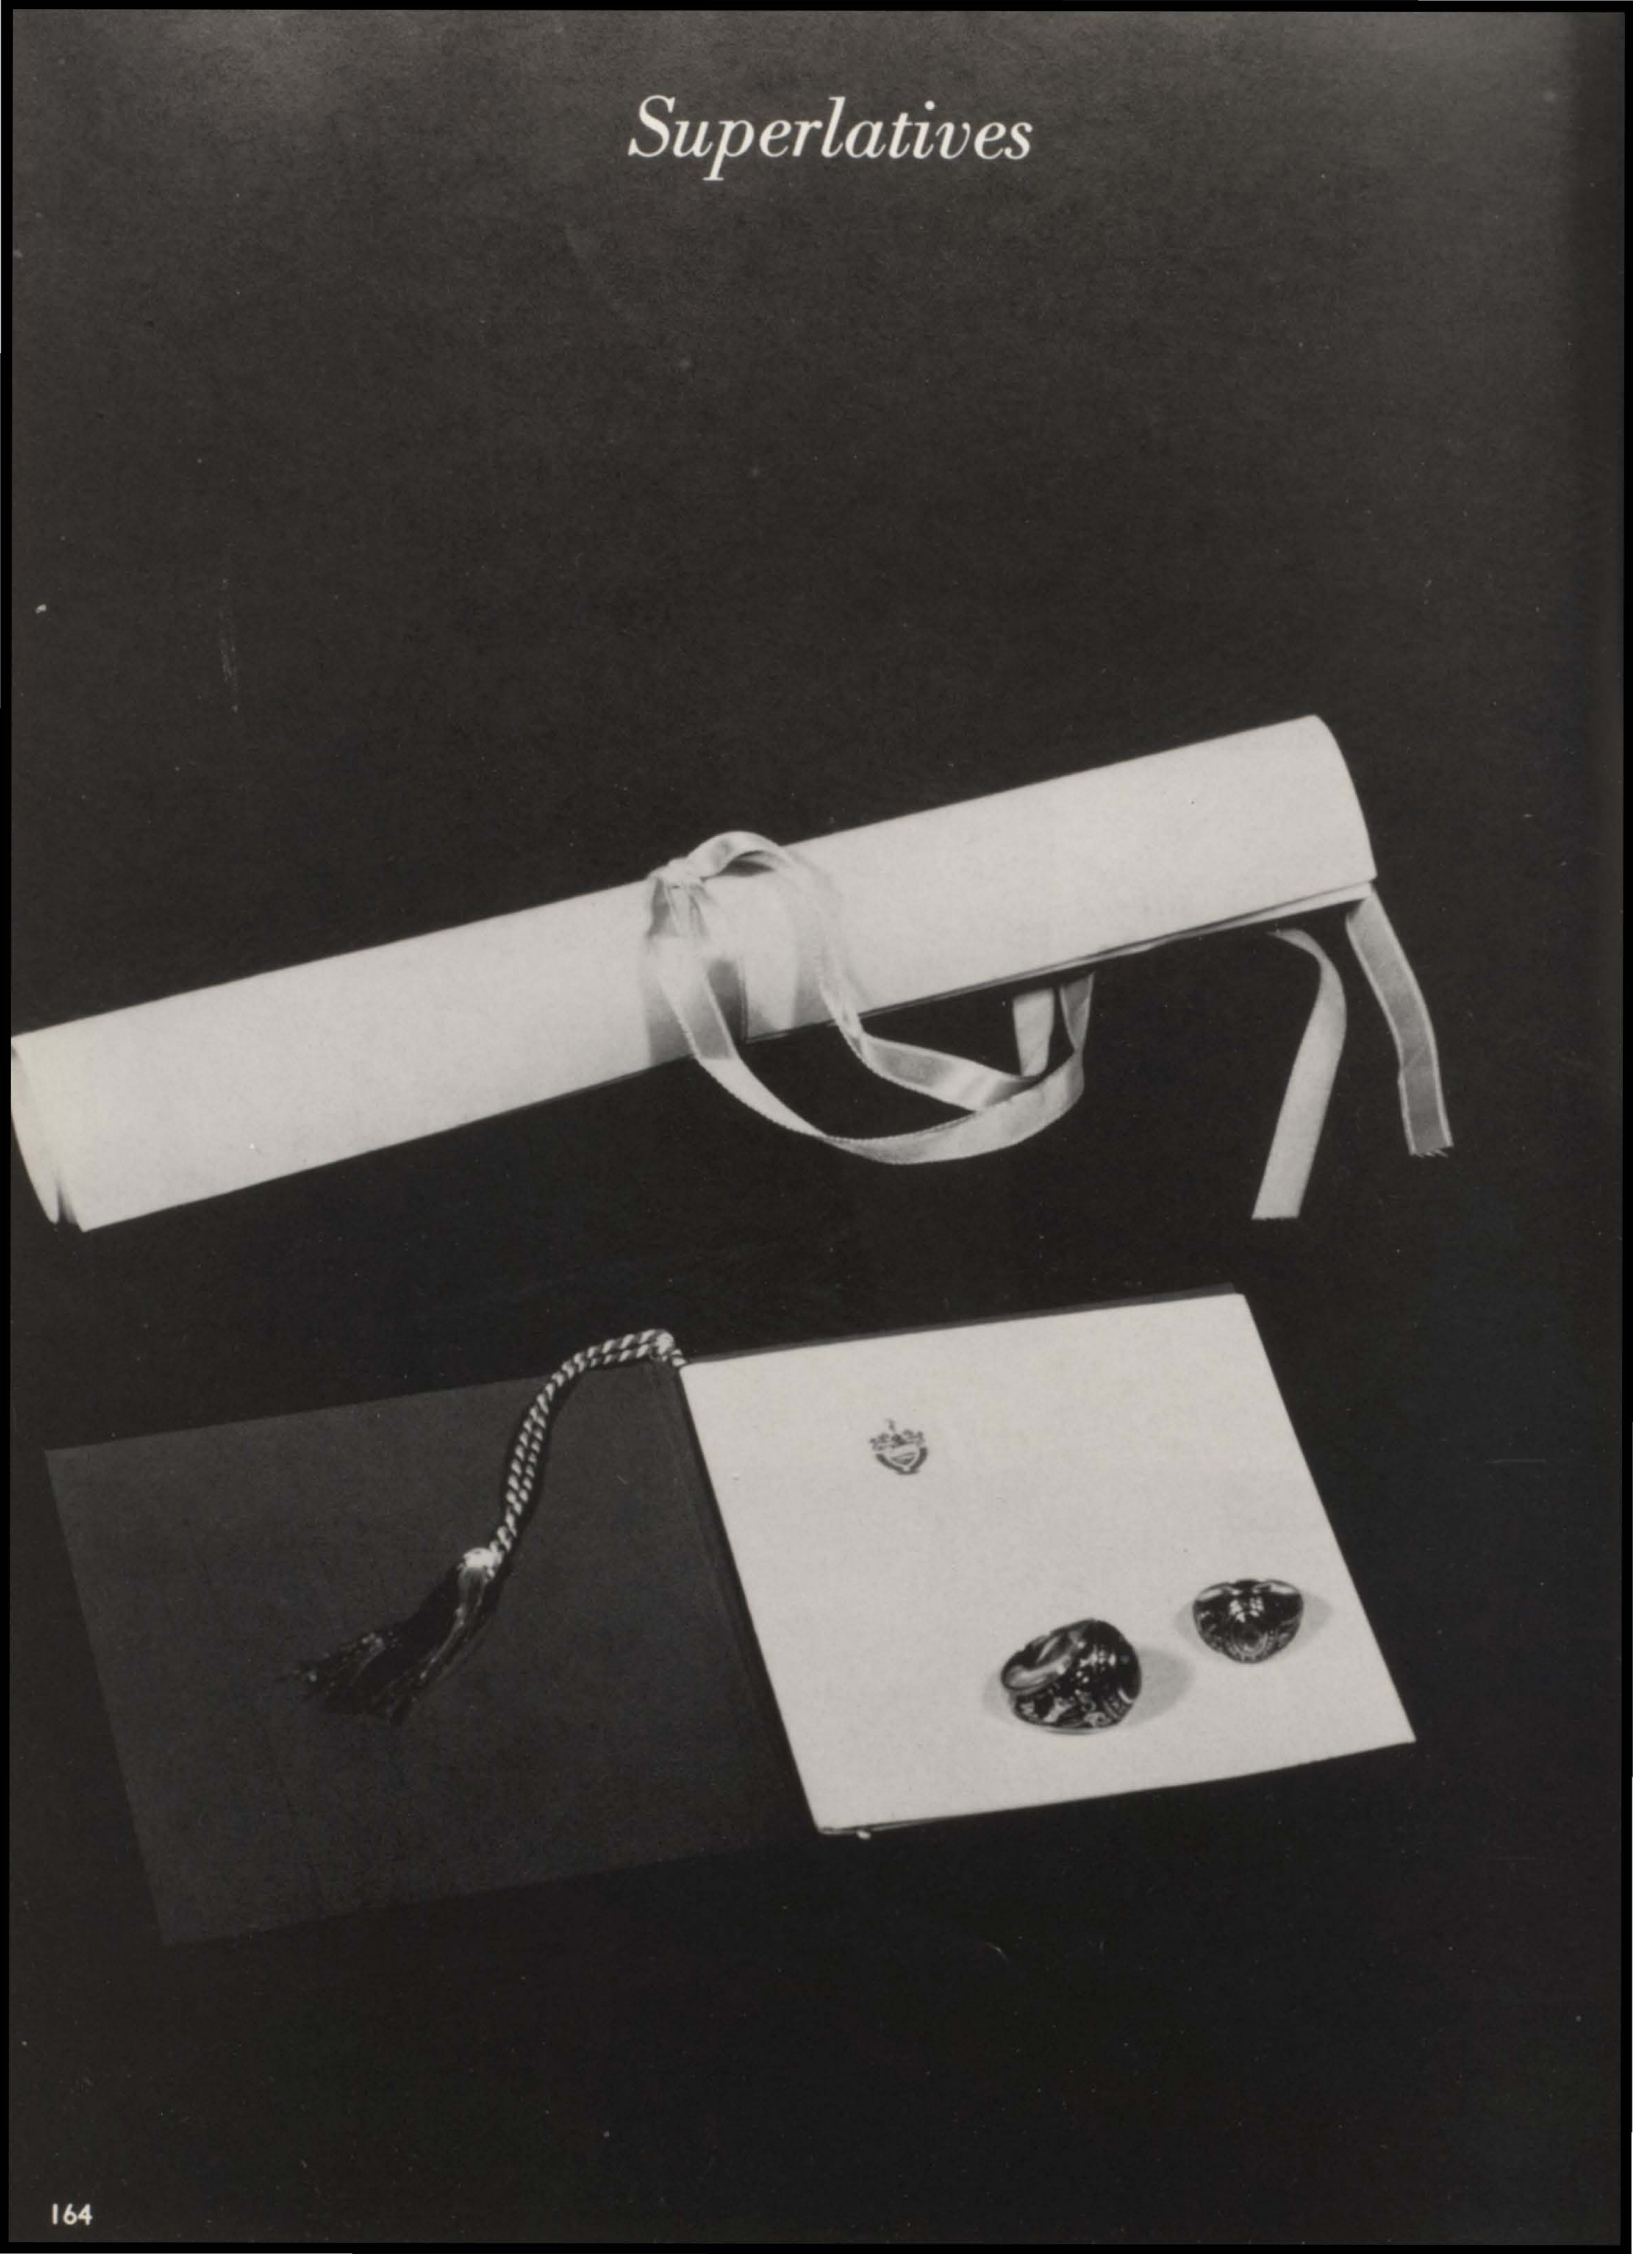
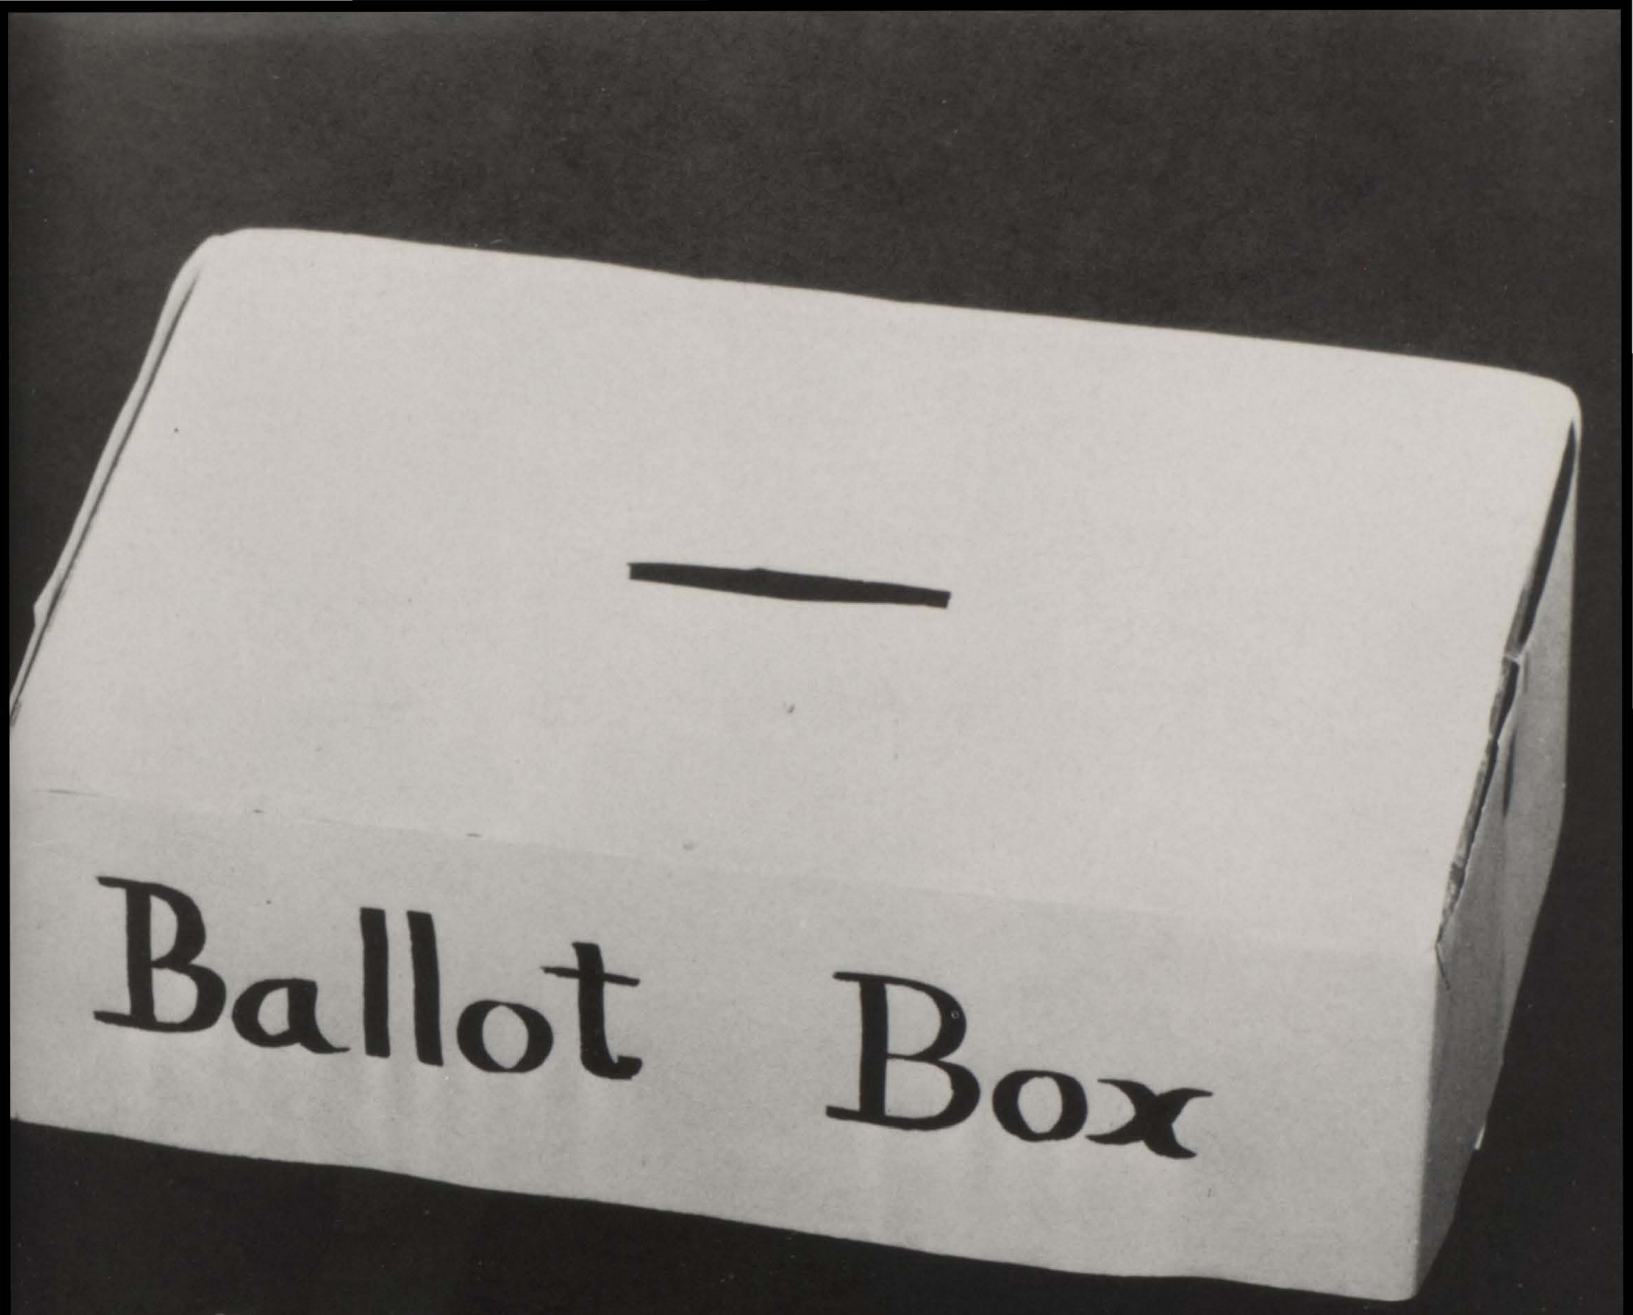
Superlatives





To be chosen a Superlative by his or her fellow seniors is one of the greatest honors which can be bestowed on any senior at Willingham or McEvoy. Voting is done only after qualifications are decided upon and nominations are made by the Senior Class. Each of our Superlatives has leadership ability, integrity, a sound academic record, and an outstanding personality. We proudly present those who represent the best of our Senior Class, those who have consistently been our outstanding students —the Superlatives.

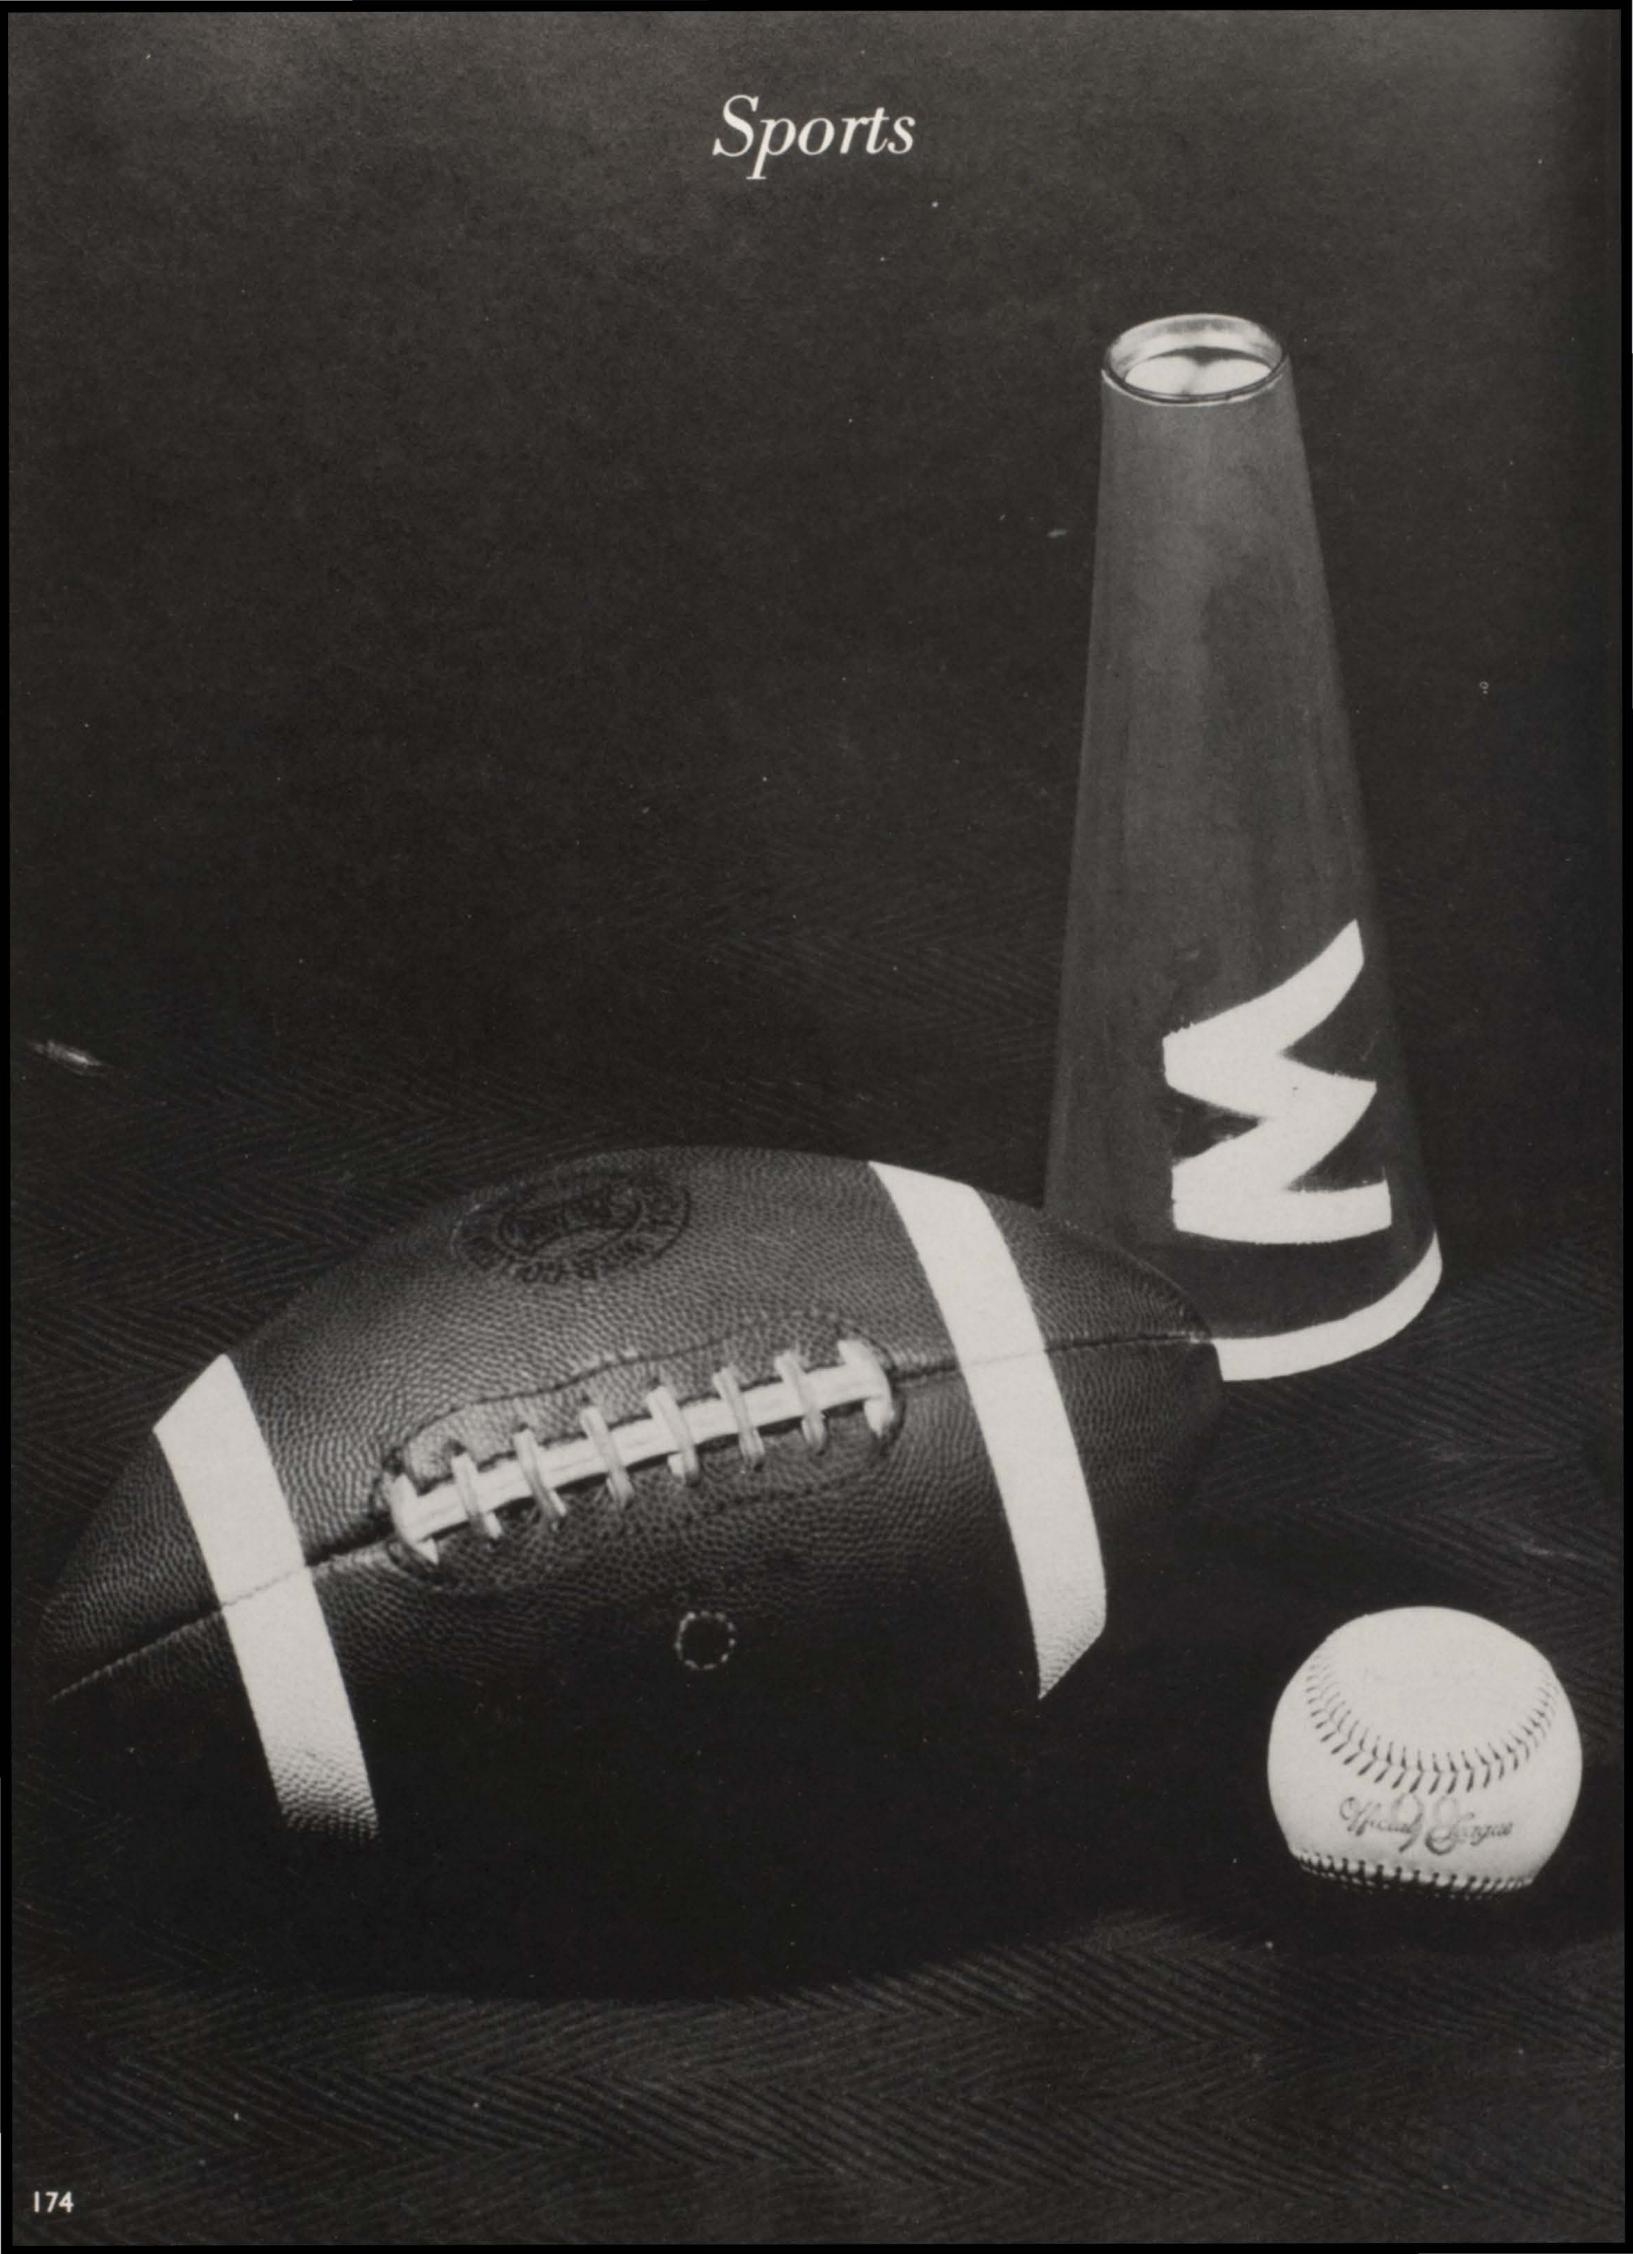
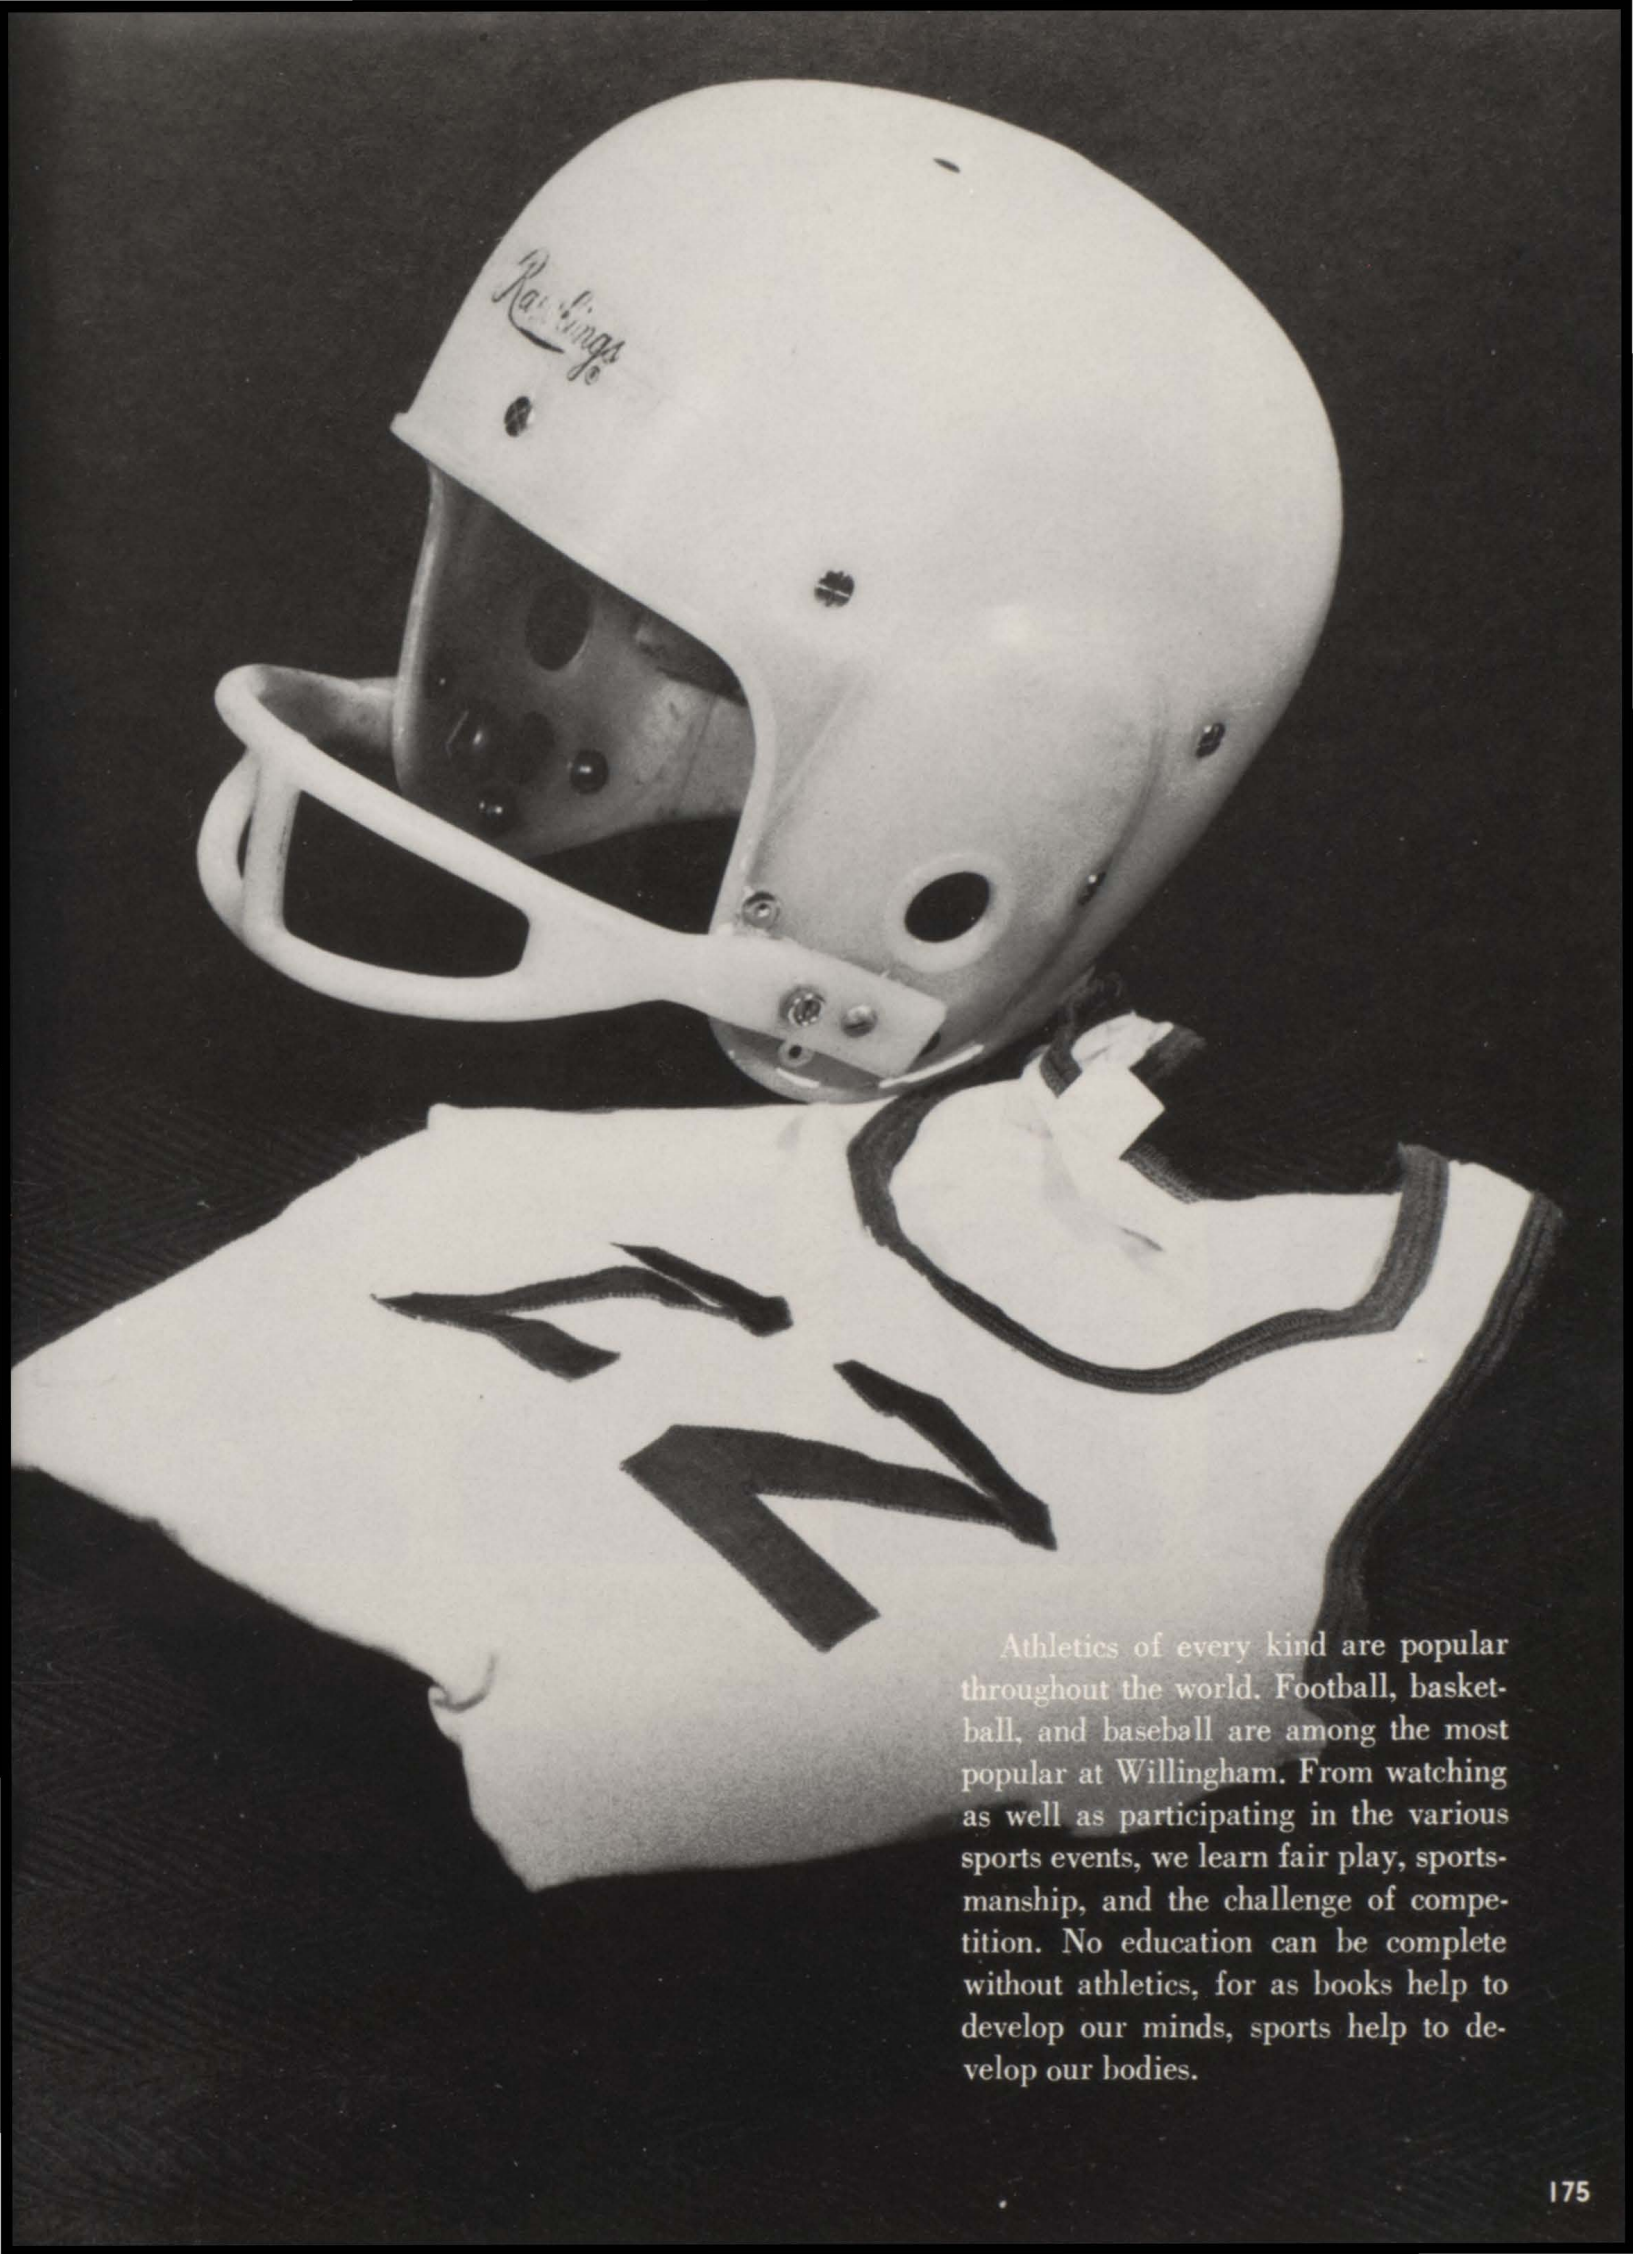
Sports





Athletics of every kind are popular throughout the world. Football, basketball, and baseball are among the most popular at Willingham. From watching as well as participating in the various sports events, we learn fair play, sportsmanship, and the challenge of competition. No education can be complete without athletics, for as books help to develop our minds, sports help to develop our bodies.

Willingham

Juniors work diligently to see that the Junior-Senior is a success.

This group of Juniors is busily preparing some of the scenery.

Junior-Senior 1961

Seniors, Juniors, and dates crowded the McEvoy Gym and marveled at its transformation as they thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Juniors Jean Moore and Jane Herin rest for a few minutes.

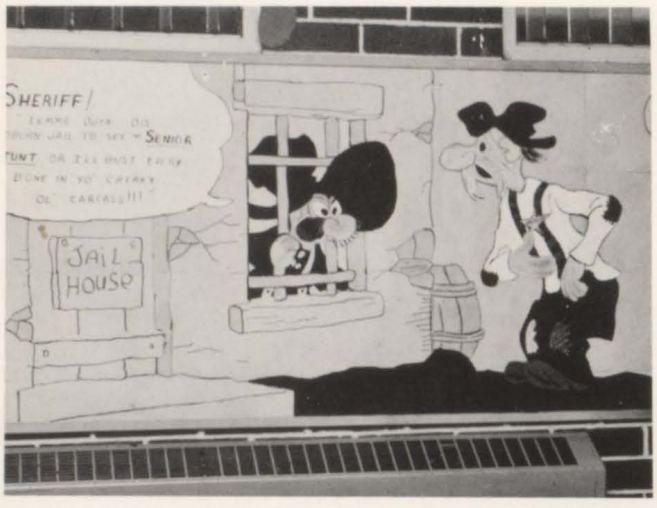
Willingham Stunt Night

These are some of our dignified Seniors participating in their stunt.

The Ninth Grade stunt was the winner.

The advertising warns the public what to expect from the Seniors.



Is this a beauty contest? No, only another scene from the winning 9th Grade stunt.

The Tenth Grade stunt placed second.

Relaxation is evident in this scene from the Tenth Grade stunt.

Christmas 1961
